LISTERINE

Listerine is an efficient, non-toxic antiseptic of accurately determined and uniform antiseptic power, prepared in a form convenient for immediate use.

Composed of volatile and non-volatile substances, Listerine is a balsamic antiseptic, refreshing in its application, lasting in its effect.

It is a saturated solution of boric acid, reinforced by the antiseptic properties of ozoniferous oils.

After the volatile constituents have evaporated, a film of boric acid remains evenly distributed upon the surfaces to which Listerine has been applied.

There is no possibility of poisonous effect through the absorption of Listerine.

Listerine is unirritating, even when applied to the most delicate tissues; in its full strength it does not coagulate serum albumin.

For those purposes wherein a poisonous or corrosive disinfectant can not be safely employed, Listerine is the most acceptable antiseptic for a physician's prescription.

Listerine is particularly useful in the treatment of abnormal conditions of the mucosa, and admirably suited for a wash, gargle or douche in catarrhal conditions of the nose and throat.

In proper dilution, Listerine may be freely and continuously used without prejudicial effect either by injection or spray, in all the natural cavities of the body.

Administered internally, Listerine is promptly effective in arresting the excessive fermentation of contents of the stomach.

In the treatment of summer complaints of infants and children, Listerine is extensively prescribed in doses of 10 drops to teaspoonful.

In febrile conditions, nothing is comparable to Listerine as a mouth wash; two or three drachms to four ounces of water.

"The Inhibitory Action of Listerine," 128 pages descriptive of the antiseptic, may be had upon application to the manufacturers,

SUGGESTIONS IN TREATING

HEMORRHOIDS BOILS FELONS CARBUNCLES

Excellent results will follow its use in these cases:

HEMORRHOIDS:—In cases of hemorrhoids CAMPHO-PHENIQUE can be used with success by the hypodermic administration of three to five drops into each hemorrhoid. It has a tendency to abort and cleanse the wound of all foreign matter, and to aid the healing process.

FOR TREATING BOILS:—To abort boils or carbuncles apply CAMPHO-PHENIQUE (liquid) using plenty of absorbent cotton. When the wound is free from inflammation, apply CAMPHO-PHENIQUE (powder) as a finishing dressing. It has a tendency to stimulate the granulation of the tissues.

FELONS:—After splitting the felon use CAMPHO-PHENIQUE (liquid) and change the dressing as often as necessary. CAMPHO-PHENIQUE (powder) is also successfully used in these cases.

THE COMMON ENEMY

In all of the exanthemata—in acute tonsillitis, erysipelas, mastoiditis, and similar disorders—"The common enemy," aided and abetted by the staphylococcus, pneumococcus and frequently the colon bacillus, is the streptococcus.

Nine-tenths of the damage wrought by these diseases is due to the invasion of the endothelial and epithelial tissues by this mixed infection, resulting in nephritis, arthritis, endocarditis, rheumatism, and other similar sequelæ.

Most of these sequelæ can be avoided by the use of COMBINED-BACTERIN VAN COTT (Abbott) during the course of the primary disease. This bacterin should be given as a routine measure in this class of troubles. It can do no harm, and in many if not most cases will save an aftermath of grave disaster.

When called upon to treat the residual conditions themselves, still COMBINED-BACTERIN VAN COTT (Abbott) is your most powerful ally. You will have success with these obstinate, obscure complaints if you back up your hygienic and medicinal treatment by its use. Try it, and you will be agreeably surprised at results.

THE PRESENT STATUS OF RADIUM IN THE TREATMENT OF CANCER*

By Wm. H. Dieffenbach, M. D., New York City

As the study and application of radium has occupied much of the time of the writer during the past twelve years, he feels justified in offering his conclusions as to the present status of radium therapy with special reference to the treatment of cancer.

It seems particularly desirable to do this at this time as the public press and monthly magazines have disseminated exaggerated information and misinformation on this subject which ought to be corrected and modified. As a preface it is important to warn the profession against preparations which are foisted upon the public, based upon the reputed efficiency of radium. These preparations are usually composed of one or more radioactive minerals and have received proprietary names such as: "thormedin," "radio-thor," "radiogen," etc. None of these preparations can honestly be labeled "radium," for while there may be a minute amount of radium metal in them, their therapeutic action depends on other substances. Thus the much-heralded "radio-thor" and "thormedin" are practically sulfuric pastes masquerading under other names.

Radium as such is now certified by many governments, including our own, and the activity of any special preparation can be ascertained and its value as a remedial agent judged by comparison with known preparations, the efficiency of which have been tested in practice. Many failures can be attributed to the lack of knowledge of physicians as to the exact activity of the special tube or disk of radium used. Thus several instances have come to my notice where reputable dermatologists have used radium of apparently imperfectly known activity for short exposures and the lesions treated instead of improving have grown worse. It can readily be understood how such physicians will honestly state that they consider radium of no value in malignant conditions, when the fault lies with their own lack of knowledge of correct dosage. Recently the estate of a deceased physician offered for sale two small tubes of radium which the doctor had used in his practice. Careful electroscopic and photographic tests showed that the radium was of so low an activity as to render it almost valueless for the cure of abnormal growths, and it can readily be appreciated why the deceased was no radium enthusiast.

If the exact dosage in milligramme hours of radium of stated activity, with the time of repetition of the dose, could be given in each successful case, the profession would soon have data upon which to base efficient therapeutics, and this desideratum cannot be too strongly emphasized.

Many tests have been made with radium upon seeds, amœba and the skin, glands and viscera of animals, and it has been ascertained that prolonged treatment with radium rays produces inhibition, which, carried to excess, causes necrosis of tissue. Short exposures, on the other hand, invariably produce hyperemia and stimulation of tissue activity. This dual action of radium corresponds with the action of x-rays and other physical agents and furnishes a basis for dosage which must be adhered to.

After a massive dose of radium has been given for inhibitive purposes, it is imperative to wait at least three weeks, preferably four weeks, until reaction subsides, before repeating treatment. If treatment is repeated too soon, necrosis supervenes and the reparative scar tissue which results from properly applied radium rays will be prevented. Large doses of radium rays destroy the nuclei and protoplasm of cells, and inflammatory reaction is induced. This is followed by fibrosis if left undisturbed, with the formation of a firm white scar.

As far as at present determined, radium acts within the sphere of its radiations only, so that it is impossible to favorably affect a lesion which the rays do not reach in a homogeneous manner and with efficient dosage. From pathological studies made for the writer on numerous occasions (Medical Record, Dec. 13, 1913), it was clearly shown that cancer cells distant from the heavy radium discharge are not amenable to its inhibitive action and will continue to flourish.

This statement having been verified many times, it will be readily seen that many lesions must perforce fail of improvement with these limitations. These limitations we have in some cases overcome by invoking surgical aid, and, after incision, have buried the radium tubes in the affected tissues. Another method tested was the injection into the deep tissues of gelatin solutions containing radium. The latest method which the writer is testing in inoperable conditions is the introduction into the growths of radium metal by means of phoresis, applying a known solution of radium by means of the positive pole of the galvanic current for fifteen minutes over the whole periphery and mass of the tumor, using as high a milliamperage as the patient can stand, usually 20 to 40 ma. This latest method has apparently proven inhibitive in several cases of inoperable mammary tumors and will be tested in other accessible lesions.

Upon local conditions such as keloids, warts, moles, fibroids, leucoplakia, birthmarks of all kinds, glandular hyperplasia, lupus and superficial epithelioma, the use of radium in proper dosage has proven specific.

The latest report of the British Radium Institute cites many hundred cases of epithelioma cured with radium, and my own records show numerous cases of over ten years' standing cured, and without recurrence.

The fungating variety of epithelioma, especially with associated glandular metastasis, unless seen early and dosed massively at once, is apt to prove refractory in most instances. In these and other deep-seated lesions much still remains to be accomplished before claiming efficient results with radium.

That some lesions of apparently hopeless prognosis have responded to massive radium radiation is demonstrated in the author's recent paper (Medical Record, Dec. 13, 1913), where malignant lesions of the bladder, of the vulva and groin and vaginal recurrences after hysterectomy for cancer have been apparently inhibited for a term of years.

Two recent lesions will be cited to show that the exact limitations of radium have not as yet been encompassed.

Case 1. Mrs. D., patient of Dr. J. W. Allen, had in the spring of 1913 developed a large tumor of the left inner thigh which increased rapidly in size and impeded walking. After consultation, Dr. Walter Gray Crump removed the mass and found that its ramifications extended far into the hip joint. Two radium tubes of 1,800,000 activity were buried in the upper portion of the incision for three days and subsequently the lower portion was treated in the same manner. The tumor proved to be spindle cell sarcoma. In view of the tendency to recurrence and metastasis of the malignant lesion, x-rays were given, in both inguinal regions in massive dose, and the whole thigh has been massively radiated in sections at intervals.

No recurrence has taken place to date. Ordinarily this lesion, involving the whole upper inner thigh, would have been considered inoperable, as a clean surgical extirpation was impossible. With the assistance of radium and x-rays, however, it was undertaken and the apparently good results warranted the combination of these methods.

Case 2. This patient was treated in conjunction with Dr. J. P. Seward, Dr. C. C. Howard and Dr. W. T. Helmuth, and presented an inoperable adenocarcinoma of the uterus. She had had intermittent hemorrhages of the uterus which curettage and examination by Dr. Louis Heitzmann showed to be due to cancer. Besides this lesion, the patient, aged 69, had diabetes mellitus of a pronounced degree. A tampon was made of two tubes of 1,800,000 activity radium and an exposure of the cervix and surrounding tissues given at intervals of two weeks, for two and three days at a time.

Subsequently, when slight hemorrhages recurred, Dr. Helmuth was called, and after dilating os uteri introduced a tube of 1,800,000 activity radium into the uterine cavity, where it was kept by tamponage for three days. Since that time bleeding has ceased and the patient is in apparent good health. Dr. Helmuth had pronounced the case an inoperable one in view of all conditions, and radium has in this instance certainly inhibited the lesion, as shown by all examinations made from time to time. Since the curettage, diagnosis and treatment, one year has elapsed and further time alone will tell of the permanency of the cure.

In malignant conditions the writer's experience has dictated the following procedure:

Whenever the lesion is not a superficial one and is approachable by the knife, have surgery invoked to remove as much of the diseased tissue as possible and follow at once with radium and x-rays in massive doses.

When inoperable, these agents must be relied upon and often a case becomes changed so that operation can be advised and radiation again used to prevent metastasis and local recurrences.

The use of radium and x-rays must, however, be given in sufficient and massive doses to secure inhibition and fibrosis, for mild and insufficient treatment is, in the writer's experience, merely conducive to early recurrence.

In conclusion, the conviction is expressed that the past decade has shown decided forward steps in the conquest of cancer. Vibrations of short wave lengths such as are secured from radium and Roentgen rays have become the helpmate of the scalpel in this dread disease, and in many instances have succeeded when surgery could not be utilized. We have every reason to look to the future with optimistic forecast, for the study of radiations and of short wave vibrations of the ether is still in its infancy and any day may bring forth some new physical manifestation and aid along lines of research in this direction.

Before this society it will be interesting to quote the conclusions of Dr. W. T. Lazarus Barlow,* Director of the Cancer Research Laboratories, Middlesex Hospital:

I see cancer as a protean manifestation of purposeless disorderly cell growth, brought into existence by long-continued action of a cell-stimulant, and I see in radium and radiation an agency sufficient to produce cancer. But, just as in the case of diphtheria, the agent which produces the disease is also the agent whereby the specific cure for the disease is elaborated; so I am prepared to see cancer caused by radium and cancer cured by radium.

Discussion

Dr. C. W. Perkins, Rochester, N. Y.: I am much interested because Dr. Dieffenbach always gives a painstaking and scientific paper. I had the pleasure of seeing some work done by the radium institutions in Europe, and if you will allow me a few minutes, I will give you a few second-hand opinions that I got from the men who are doing work in Vienna, Paris and Berlin.

In the Wertheim Frauen clinic in Vienna, a gynecological clinic, they picked out a certain number of selected cases, and said if radium is of any value, it ought to help in these cases. They were cases of beginning cancer. I believe they experimented with a dose of about 100 milligrammes, which was found to be too strong. They found that radium acted not only upon abnormal tissue, but upon normal tissue. In one case that was treated last year—I saw the case in February—radium had not only destroyed all the cancerous tissue, but the normal tissue. Along the hips you could see long red streaks of the radioactive discharges. They concluded from that that they used the radium in too powerful doses.

*Archives of the Roentgen Ray, June, 1914.

In Von Eiselberg's clinic, Vienna, they give a record of seventy cases. I was told by Von Eiselberg's assistant that they had seventy cases of all kinds of cancer treated by radium, cases which seemed most favorable to treatment. There was only one case that they felt they had any definite action from radium, and that was in sarcoma of the tonsil. The patient seemed to be better, but the general system was in a much worse condition than before. She was pale, anemic and much emaciated.

In the Polyclinic in Vienna they have apparently satisfactory results, because they are beginning to use smaller doses, ten to twenty milligrammes, for fewer hours and less frequently. The general conclusion of the experimenters is that radium is still in the experimental stage. I think most of the men who are doing work with radium appreciate that and take that view.

I agree entirely with Dr. Dieffenbach that surgery is the first thing to be done, and follow up by the x-ray or radium. Many think the x-ray can be controlled better, and use it in preference to radium. In Paris and Berlin, such men as Professors Franz and Bécclerc have mostly discarded the use of radium and prefer the x-ray.

Dr. Willard A. Paul, Boston: This is the most important thing that has come before us in a long time. I understand that radium will cause cancer. I would like to have Dr. Dieffenbach go into the subject a little further. I want to know positively whether that has been done.

Dr. E. S. Smith, Bridgeport, Conn.: Dr. Dieffenbach's modesty prevents his stating all he has done. I would like to refer to three cases which he has treated for me:

First. A patient 72 years old, operated on for epithelioma of cheek. In three or four years it returned and he was operated again without success. There was never a healing of this second operation, although everything likely to promote healing was done. Three treatments of radium by Dr. Dieffenbach completely healed the surface, and it is now over two years, so I infer the patient is cured.

Second. A patient of 85, epithelioma of the forearm, the size of a quarter of a dollar. Two treatments by Dr. Dieffenbach have terminated the trouble.

Third. A patient 65 years old, epithelioma on tip of nose, was given three treatments, and although the last treatment was too recent to report upon the permanency of cure, there is every indication that the growth has been controlled.

Dr. Alonzo C. Tenney, Chicago: I am interested in Dr. Dieffenbach's work, and am most gratified with the report he brings. One feature I want to emphasize; that is, radium therapy is a specialty in itself. We know men who are using radium and doing harm, others are doing great good. I do not think we should condemn statistics of a group of men, but I would rather accept Dr. Dieffenbach's conclusions than those of a lot of doctors who have used it only once or in a limited number of cases.

Dr. Walter Sands Mills, New York City: Dr. Dieffenbach has treated a case of mine. An old gentleman, who had a spot on his hand that had been removed by surgical measures twice, and it came back each time. Dr. Dieffenbach applied radium, and to me it was a very curious thing to see the result. He put a little radium over the spot under a piece of plaster, and the patient had nothing to do but read the paper and look out of the window during the two hours it was on. The spot looked just the same for a number of days. Finally the spot seemed to be a trifle smaller, but not for a week or so. At the end of about a month the thing disappeared entirely. After each application, after a few days the thing would shrivel and shrink, until the place is now cured.

Dr. Dieffenbach: In answering Dr. Perkins, I will say I tried to bring out the fact that an excessive dose of radium will cause the greatest necrosis. Excessive radioactivity seems to have been imparted to the cells, and they are destroyed. Stimulating or inhibiting cells can be accomplished by the proper dose. It must be carefully studied, and the mere fact that you are possessed of a tube of radium does not entitle you to use it. Dr. Barlow of Middlesex Hospital, London, England, has been an investigator in this subject, and I put forth his conclusions at the end of the paper. He states that in studying mummies in Egypt, he invariably finds that where the patients died of cancer, the radioactivity is remarkably increased, and in a number of mummies in which they found gallstones, the gallstones were radioactive and the tissue itself was radioactive, and he drew the conclusion that the presence of even a minute amount of radium produces the persistent irritation which we know leads to cancer. All surgeons agree that a persistent irritation is usually the forerunner of some malignant degeneration. Dr. Barlow claims that as we get older, the radioactive substances, which are found all over the world and are sometimes in food and drinking water, accumulate in the system and as we get older we have a larger amount of radium, and it furnishes the stimulus for the formation of a cancer. He draws the conclusion, inasmuch as we know local epithelioma and many other growths to have been positively cured by the application of radium, that this conforms to the idea that diphtheria is cured by the antitoxin secured from diphtheria. He assumes that the accumulation of radium in the system will cause cancer, and asks why cannot we cure the diseases with radium also? He does not admit that it looks homœopathic. It certainly does to the on-looker.

Dr. Cora S. King, Washington, D. C.: If it is true that the famous baths of Europe have for part of their active principle radioactive properties, what would be the effect upon the bathers? Would the accumulation have any tendency to cancer later in life?

Dr. Dieffenbach (closing the discussion): The theories are that the persistent accumulation of radium, with the addition of some trauma, would produce or favor the production of these aberrant cells which we call cancer. I would warn against the excessive use of radium water. We know that a large number of cases have been benefited by minute doses of radium, but if it is continued year in and year out, you will undoubtedly get the opposite effect.

The Clearer Vision: Children and poets may be quite impracticable in this war-stricken time, but they come very close to the truth in their perceptions. One of the illustrations in the daily press during the past week was of a little girl kissing her soldier father good-bye with the question: "Are you going to kill some other little girl's papa?"

And another paper quotes Richard Le Gallienne's verses on

THE ILLUSION OF WAR.

War I abhor, and yet how sweet
The sound along the marching street
Of drum and fife, and I forget
Wet eyes of widows, and forget
Broken old mothers, and the whole
Dark butchery without a soul.

Without a soul—save this bright drink
Of heady music, sweet as hell;
And even my peace-abiding feet
Go marching with the marching street,
For yonder, yonder goes the fife,
And what care I for human life!

The tears fill my astonished eyes,
And my full heart is like to break;
And yet 'tis all embannered lies,
A dream those little drummers make.

O it is wickedness to clothe
Yon hideous grinning thing that stalks
Hidden in music, like a queen
That in a garden of glory walks,
Till good men love the thing they loathe.
Art, thou has many infamies,
But not an infamy like this.
O stop the fife and still the drum,
And show the monster as she is.

THE MENTAL INFLUENCE OF DRUGS*

By Eldridge C. Price, M. D., Baltimore, Md.

Not only is it true in the dominant school of medicine, but throughout the medical world generally, surgery and expectancy, to quite an extent, have crowded the finer uses of drugs into the background. No sensible man will decry surgery inside its legitimate field of usefulness (and that field generally opens when drugs are of no further avail), but may not drugs many times be productive of more positive and better results than the "waiting watchful" policy of expectancy so often followed at the present time? Is it possible that the many Herculean tasks represented in the field of drug pathogenesis of the past century are to be relegated to oblivion, and the therapeutic verifications of these pathogenetic results set aside as of less importance than expectancy?

We still claim to have a homœopathic school, and those who are graduates of institutions classed as homœopathic colleges, claim to be representatives of that school, but do the majority of these graduates have a practical, working faith in homœopathy? Beyond a few fundamental homœopathic indications for a few drugs—now shared in common with all medical practitioners—do these modern graduates persistently endeavor to practice homœopathy to the best of their ability? In the modern rush of new ideas, and the electric speed at which we are living generally, I fear we older men also do not altogether escape the prevalent suspicion of lack of thoroughness in our application of the law of similars.

It is true that the therapeutics of the dominant school have become much more rational than a generation ago, but in this beneficent advance in the methods of healing the sick is there no longer room for homœopathy? We contend that there is.

The elaborators of toxins and sera tell us many things which are not new to us. The electrotherapeutist corroborates the milde macht of drugs in his discovery of the power of radioactive agents. The experimental psychologist opens up a dazzling vista of possibilities when he suggests a significance for the vagaries of dreamland. Why then should we who say we believe in law in therapeutics, who claim that a particular law has been definitely verified and established beyond question, and who further have the knowledge to continuously extend these verifications, why should we permit ourselves to be led by those who are as well qualified to follow as are we?

We are now told that all physical conditions produce definite mental attitudes, the result of transmission of the influence of physical disturbance through the nerve tracts to the mind, and vice versa, it has been shown that mental states are capable of producing profound conditions in the physical body.

Retracing our steps back to the days of the great German Hippocrates, Hahnemann, we find that this interdependent relationship was not unknown to this sage. We find him teaching the prime importance of taking into consideration the mental manifestations of the patient about to be treated for some physical ailment.

This being true, we are justified both by the philosophy of the giant of Meissen and by the claims of modern science, that, in endeavoring to heal the sick, it is wise to consider both the mental and the physical condition of the patient. Furthermore, it is not necessary to open a new field of drug pathogenetic experimentation to discover the means for surrounding the patient in a thoroughly expert and scientific manner, because of the fact that enough significant experiments have already been made to enable us to make practical application of drugs not only to physical conditions, but also to manifestations in which the mind plays a paramount part. Not only have these finer effects of drugs upon the mind been reported by the pathogenetic experimenter, but the therapist has many times verified these previsional claims of the experimenter.

Let us examine into the soundness of our contention.

Back of every organ and tissue of the human body, and of the various functions of these organs and tissues is that animating something we call nerve force; and back of this nerve force is an intangible agency by which the supply of this force throughout the whole organism is more or less influenced. This agency is generally known as mind, and, as is well known, its influence is not limited to the nerves included in the cerebrospinal system, but the boundary between this system and that through which the vegetative functions of the organism are maintained is not infrequently crossed, and for good or for bad a greater or less effect produced.

Such being the case, we are not surprised that influences traveling over the various nerve tracts may be reversed, and disturbances of greater or less import at any point in the organism, from the extreme periphery to the nerve centres, register these occurrences in the mind. Consequently, through the afferent and the efferent provisions of the nervous system, we find mental disturbances producing a logical sequence of results in the gross physiology and even the anatomy, and vice versa. Any agent, therefore, which influences the mind may ultimately produce an effect upon an outlying organ or tissue, and any agent causing disturbance in an organ or tissue may produce a mental effect. It is not always easy to trace the cause of either mental or physical changes back to their sources, but the time may come when man will be able to solve many more of these problems of physiological and psychological effects than he is now able to do.

It is a well known fact that the kind of food one eats not only produces its effects upon the physical structure of the body, but that it also may be classed among the influences that have much to do with mental development. This being the case it is quite reasonable to assume that not only will food produce mental attitudes and conditions, but that other substances or influences brought to bear upon the histological elements of the organism may produce mental results. We are, therefore, prepared to find as a result of experiments with drugs upon the healthy human organism, various expressions of mental deviation from the normal; and not only are these mental effects of drugs the result of the influence of the drug upon some other part of the organism, but apparently there are drugs that act directly upon the mind—or at least nerve centres—without the intervention or involvement of any other organ or tissue. While this direct approach may be true of some drugs, yet the average drug appeals to the nerve centres—and ultimately the mind—through the blood stream as the medium of approach. Drug modification of the opsonic index and the stimulation of phagocytosis has nothing to do with the point at issue.

It is therefore quite probable that no change is produced in the general organism that does not to a greater or less extent influence the mentality of the individual, and it is, consequently, not surprising that a study of drug symptomatology reveals a great variety of mental disturbances due to drug ingestion. These disturbances may be divided into two great classes of tendencies, one of exhilaration and the other of depression; and in turn these two classes may be subdivided into deviations subject to control, and to uncontrollable deviations.

Although the mental effects of drugs may be grouped in a general way, yet each drug is an individual in its symptomatology and not interchangeable with other drugs excepting in its grosser effects. For example, the following twenty-eight drugs produce more or less mental depression, but each drug may by careful study be differentiated from its analogues: Pulsatilla, china, bryonia, sulphur, arsenicum album, cimicifuga, staphisagria, rhus toxicodendron, phosphorus, chelidonium majus, anacardium, natrum muriaticum, aurum, aconite, argentum nitricum, chininum sulphuricum, cocculus, cuprum, cactus, ferrum, ignatia, liliun tigrinum, nitric acid, silica, thuja and veratrum album.

Not only does the mentality of each of these agents differ from that of another, but the concomitant detailed effects upon the more material parts of the body also differ. Investigation will show that mental depression caused by hepatic derangement is not identical with mental depression caused by uterine derangement, or anemia, or cardiac involvement. It will also be found that the mental depression of all drugs affecting the heart, is by no means identical. For example, both cactus and digitalis produce a state of anxiety; the former becoming hypochondriacal with inclination to weep, while the latter has no such lachrymose tendency, but in its place has a weakened memory.

Extending investigation still further into the field of lachrymosis, it is discovered that besides pulsatilla, there are sulphur, chamomilla, cina, natrum muriaticum, ipecacuanha, apis mellifica, aurum and ignatia, all causing a tearful state, but each having concomitantly different conditions.

That great therapeutic mantle of charity, sulphur, because of its wide field of operation, is more difficult to differentiate in the causative field of mental symptoms than any of its analogues. As Dr. T. F. Allen says, "Since sulphur is an integral part of every form of protoplasm, it follows that all tissue becomes affected by its abnormal exhibition, and no particular limit or character can be assigned to it." It may therefore be said that if the homœopathic practitioner is ever pardonable for the routine prescription of a drug, sulphur is that drug. Possibly, however, the anxious, melancholy, tearfulness of sulphur may be due to derangement of the portal circulation in which hemorrhoidal congestion is conspicuous.

The peevish, "cantankerous" condition of the crying children in whom chamomilla is indicated, finds its origin in a nervous erethism caused by irritation of the terminal nerve filaments, whether due to intestinal disturbance or to dentition. Cina depression owes its existence to intestinal irritation also, but usually the presence of parasites may be responsible.

Another lachrymose drug is natrum muriaticum, and being a drug with widespread influence upon the organism, acting as it does, directly upon the blood, the lymphatics, the liver, the spleen, and the digestive tract, a general condition of misery is doubtless the cause of the mental depression, melancholy and tears. Especially in long standing cases of malarial manifestation is the mentality of natrum muriaticum in evidence, and it is here some of its greatest victories have been achieved.

The peevish, irritable, impatient crying of children, which is subdued by ippecac may have the cause of the trouble traced to the intestinal tract, due often to over-eating of rich food.

The changeable moods of ignatia, laughter alternating with tears, most frequently find their cause in derangement of the spinal cord; but those cases in which the patient suppresses grief and seeks solitude in which to shed tears find their origin in some sudden psychological shock to the nervous system.

With the drugs causing mental exhilaration, including belladonna, stramonium, agaricus muscarius, coffea, and cannabis Indica, the same differentiation of the origin of the mental deviation is possible.

Among the definite delirium-producing drugs are belladonna, stramonium, hyoscyamus, agaricus, coffea, cannabis Indica, baptisia, rhus toxicodendron, apis mellifica, lachesis, absinthium, and veratrum album. Of this group of drugs, in the three solanaceae, belladonna, stramonium, and hyoscyamus, the delirium is very closely allied; belladonna is usually associated with the greatest degree of circulatory disturbance, hyoscyamus is more purely neurotic, with milder delirium, while stramonium is most violent of the three. The tendency of the last two drugs is to perverted sexuality, while there is little of this tendency in belladonna.

The mental influence of agaricus results in preëminent lack of coördination of ideas, which is expressed in inconsequent, garrulous babbling, and characteristically consistent with this mental state are the choreic muscular movements and twitchings.

The delirium of bryonia alba is due to circulatory disturbance, notably in typhoid fever, in which the nerve centres are poisoned, its character being quite distinctive, as we all know.

Cimicifuga delirium is purely neurotic, and trenches upon the sleeping hours of the patient, when terrifying dreams of wild animals occur.

Like bryonia, gelsemium owes its mental state to circulatory disturbance primarily, and secondarily, the nerve centres being subjected to typhoid poison produce mental dulness and ultimately sluggishness degenerating into complete unconsciousness; concomitently the whole motor sphere of the cerebrospinal system is quiescent.

Even more decided in typhoid fever is the besotted stupor of baptisia. Add to this its characteristic delirium, and we have a mental picture which is quite distinctive.

Another typhoid-delirium drug is rhux toxicodendron, which is not at all difficult to differentiate, through its mentality, from the drugs mentioned—to say nothing of its general concomitants.

The cause of the characteristic shriek of apis, breaking through its stupor, we recognize as serious meningeal trouble; but ovarian irritation may be accountable for the irritable, waspish mood sometimes found in jealous women.

The jumping from one subject to another in septic states, doubtless when active leucocytosis is present, whether due to typhoid, diphtheria, suppurating wounds or gangrene, is quite characteristic of lachesis.

The terrifying hallucinations and brutal insanity of absinth find their cause in the persistent congestion of cerebral centres.

Cannabis Indica is one of the most remarkable drugs known, in its field of mental perversion. It is distinctively a neurotic drug, acting apparently directly upon the nervous system, the character of its mental influence being an exaggeration of the habitual tendencies of the mind of the experimenter, whether for good or bad. In fact, its most dominant hallucination is exaggeration of any idea entertained. All the special senses are acute and all impressions are incalculably magnified, whether of sight or hearing, pleasure or pain.

The mental symptoms of veratrum album may be and usually are due to direct action of the drug upon the brain. This applies especially to the mania of the drug with its raging and screaming; but the bowel condition may be responsible for the great depression of spirits.

Among other drugs causing various mental symptoms, mercury may be cited. Its weak memory is doubtless due to a profound disintegration of the blood, similar to the effects of syphilis; the weak memory of staphisagria is due to prostatitis with accompanying spermatorrhea; the mental depression and weak memory of lilium tigrinum from derangement of the uterus or ovaries, or both; the suicidal tendency of aurum, due in some instances to a degeneracy of vital organs, especially great hyperplastic congestion of the uterus, or to its direct action upon the brain, or to mercury or syphilis, or a combination of the two; and the suicidal tendency of arsenicum due to the run down, miserable state of the system resulting from anemia even of the pernicious kind.

Among other drugs with definite mental influence, cactus, natrum muriaticum and china, may be cited as all having a desire for solitude, but each having concomitant conditions entirely unrelated and which serve to clearly differentiate the prescription of the respective drug. The heart is the organ we would expect to find involved when cactus is needed; faulty metabolism probably due to malaria would call for natrum muriaticum; and a depleted state of the organism due to loss of fluids would point to china.

On the other hand is a group of drugs which is indicated when the patient is indifferent to his surroundings. Among them we find sepia indicated when the sexual sphere is involved, hamamelis when the circulatory system is at fault with resulting hemorrhage, phosphorus in gravely depleted nerve force and disorganization of red blood corpuscles, helleborus when there is serious meningeal trouble, and phosphoric acid when there has been over-exertion of mind or body, sexual excesses or grief.

Another group of drugs we find indicated in hypersensitiveness to extraneous impressions. Among them is pulsatilla with its sexual involvement, belladonna with its arterial congestion, arnica with its typhoid tendency or results from mechanical injury, chamomilla with its primary influence upon the nervous system, or possibly the liver or digestive tract mucous membrane, coffea with its direct action upon the nervous system, and lilium tigrinum with its characteristic sexual system derangements.

With drug pathogenetic prediction of the usefulness of the foregoing drugs, under the circumstances noted, together with the multitude of repeated clinical verifications of these previsional suggestions, is the practical physician justified in substituting modern expectancy for what is offered in this field of mental therapeutic possibilities?

Surgery in its proper field is good; expectancy is sometimes better than poor therapeutics; but drugs intelligently used may prevent conditions from drifting into the field of surgery, and always offer greater possibilities for good than does expectancy. It is wise, therefore, for the medical practitioner to become thoroughly versed in drug symptomatology, and as mental expressions are more certainly indicative of the character of the derangement of the various organs and tissues of the body than any other class of subjective symptoms, it follows that the patient's mentality should be most carefully studied by the practitioner of medicine to the end that he may be able not only to palliate conditions, but that he may through this knowledge restore the patient to health, which is the greatest of all human blessings.

Outside the pale of homœopathy there is very little information discoverable of how to base drug prescription upon mental symptomatology, although, as already stated, mental attitudes and even dreams are seriously considered by the modern psychologist. The knowledge at the command of the modern homœopathic practitioner renders him familiar, not only with mental states in disease and parallel mental effects of drugs upon the healthy, but also reveals to him a law upon which to prescribe these drugs in physical and mental derangements. The logical conclusion is, therefore, that, although under stress of some circumstances, expectancy may be justified, yet there is not only room for homœopathy among the modern methods of healing the sick, but that a knowledge of homœopathy is one of the essentials of the modern scientific physician.

Excess Baggage.—Most of our human worries are simply excess baggage, that we do not need to take along and to carry which costs us in bodily wear and tear ten times its value. It is a good plan to travel light and take things as easy as possible. Not that we should shirk either our work or our responsibilities; but we need not carry excess baggage.—Chicago Bulletin of Health.

Fewer Medical Students.—It is a significant fact that notwithstanding the tremendous decrease in the medical registration that has taken place in this country during the past ten years, the homœopathic and eclectic schools have not suffered a decrease in any degree relative to that suffered by the medical colleges of the dominant school.—Cincinnati Med. News, Feb. 19, 1914.

REPORT OF TWENTY-EIGHT CESAREAN SECTIONS WITHOUT A DEATH*

By Florence N. Ward, M. D., San Francisco, Cal.

In discussing Cesarean section, particularly its practical aspects, the most profitable conclusions may be drawn from an analysis of a group of cases. This will be my motive in presenting a series of 28 cases that I have operated. The number is sufficiently large to permit certain deductions, of value in either verifying results obtained by others, or in modifying existing interpretations.

Cesarean section now occupies a distinctive position in surgery, its sphere has steadily enlarged during the last few years, displacing the old mutilating operations upon the child to save the mother, and becoming practically the single procedure in obstructive dystocia, be the obstruction due to the passenger or to the passage. It has invaded and supplanted high forceps operations, symphysiotomy, pubiotomy, craniotomy upon the living child, and it is the accepted procedure for placenta previa.

The obstetrician owes much to the surgeon for this essential development. With the advances in abdominal surgery, the mortality of coeliotomy, in simple and clean cases, is reduced to less than 1%; celio-hysterotomy or Cesarean section takes its place among this group of operations.

As for the operation itself, the technic has become so perfected that little is left to be desired. It is the pre-operative period that needs more attention, not only in the wise selection of cases, but also in the choice of time for operating. These considerations will determine, many times, the successful outcome for mother and child. Upon the general practitioner must devolve many of the decisions, and also the care of the patient before operation is undertaken. Any mistakes at this time may be enough to nullify the otherwise perfect results of the operation, and it is to this point that particular attention will be devoted.

Mortality.—In analyzing my series of cases, the mortality rate for the mothers was nil, of 28 operated, 28 recovered. Of the infants, 6 were nonviable, these being cases in which the mother's condition was so desperate that the operation was done solely in her interest; but of the full term babies all, or 23, lived; one patient having twins.

Age.—Of the 28 patients, 18 were primipara and 10 multipara; 5 required Cesarean section because of damage inflicted by the first labor. The oldest patient was 45; the youngest 16½ years. In decades, three were in their forties, 11 in the thirties, 13 in the twenties, 1 under 20.

Indications.—The indications varied greatly, embracing the accidental, the mechanical or obstructive, and the constitutional forms of dystocia.

Of the 28 cases, 10 were elective, the rest were permitted the test of labor, or the operation was undertaken as the result of complication of labor.

I. Accidental.

Of the accidental conditions, placenta previa necessitated the operation 5 times.

The case in which there were fractures of both femora presented many interesting features. During the first days of her pregnancy she was out riding with her husband, when the horses became frightened and ran away. Her husband was killed and she sustained a fracture of both femora. She was taken to a hospital in the country, the fractures apparently reduced and she was immobilized on her back. Her surgeons were unable to secure union, notwithstanding repeated anesthetics and resettings. Pregnancy was not expected, failure to menstruate was attributed to shock, and it was not until enlargement of the abdomen and fetal movements became manifest that a diagnosis of pregnancy was made. She was brought to the city still immobilized in bed on the seventh month of her pregnancy. X-ray showed angulation and non-union of both femora. Dr. Hunkin then operated upon the left femur, plating the fractured ends, and in six weeks, plated the right femur. The patient was immobilized in a cast from mid-chest to her toes. As the expected time of delivery drew near, the abdominal portion of the cast was cut away preparatory to an abdominal Cesarean, which was performed at the first symptom of labor. The position of the child was L. O. P. The result was a living child and good recovery of mother, both as regards her confinement and later ability to walk.

II. Mechanical or Obstructive.

Of the mechanical conditions due to fetal abnormalities, there were 5 cases of occiput posterior position. In each, labor progressed 24 hours or more, with but slight dilation and non-engagement of the head. The inability of the patients to deliver themselves was evident and a Cesarean section was considered the quickest and safest procedure. I am very much inclined to Warren's opinion that a backward displacement of the occiput means usually a narrow conjugate and is the result, not the cause, of the obstruction.

There was one case of brow presentation. The head, which was larger in all its measurements than normal, could not be made to engage in the superior strait, notwithstanding good uterine contractions for 36 hours. It was clearly a case of disproportion of the head for that special pelvis and necessitated interference for the delivery.

Maternal obstruction conditions were the cause of dystocia in 8 cases, one being fibroids in a woman of 44 years in whom there was the complication of albuminuria and twin pregnancy.

There were 5 cases of cicatricial contractions in the vaginal vault, following severe labors with instrumental deliveries; all of these were referred to me by their physicians, the cicatricial masses were so extensive that the physicians were not willing to undertake their care by the ordinary methods. These were all elective operations, Cesarean being performed when the first premonitory symptoms of labor appeared, or at the expected time of labor.

Flat pelvis occurred in 2 cases, one an undeveloped girl of 16, in whom eclampsia occurred; the child was oversized, weighing 9 lbs. 1 oz. There was one case of deformed pelvis from congenital dislocation of both femora.

There was one case of large uterine fibroids blocking the pelvic canal. In the 4th month of her pregnancy a coeliotomy was performed by a local surgeon in an effort to remove the fibroids. On opening the abdomen it was found inadvisable to do a myomectomy, and the abdomen was closed, permitting the pregnancy to progress to full term. At full term I delivered the child by Cesarean section, and then performed a Porro.

III. Constitutional.

In the constitutional conditions the toxemias played a large part, numbering 8; 2 patients being in coma and eclamptic, and one of edema of so severe a type that the vulva was impassable by reason of the enormous swelling of the external genitals.

The cases giving the greatest anxiety were those of albuminuria, in which the symptoms of toxemia increased steadily under the stress of labor, and which were accompanied by a rigid, unyielding cervix; the uterine contractions had apparently no effect in thinning or dilating it. In these ineffectual labors it was always deemed wise to empty the uterus by Cesarean before allowing the patient to pass into the danger zone.

There was one case of Cesarean section for a chronic endocarditis, following acute rheumatism; every valve was involved, it was an extremely severe lesion. The patient consulted me during the early weeks of pregnancy as to the advisability of permitting it to continue. She had had a therapeutic abortion performed 6 years previously on account of the cardiac lesion. In the present case Dr. Spaulding was called in consultation, the condition was carefully explained to the patient, the danger of terminating the pregnancy, and also the risks involved in its continuance. As she greatly desired the child, she concluded to continue the pregnancy, leaving the conduct of labor to our judgment. The patient was kept under observation during her pregnancy, carefully dieted, and remained in bed during the last few weeks. I made a very rapid Cesarean toward the end of the pregnancy, just before the expected time of labor. Dr. E. P. Glover administered the anesthetic. Both mother and child made a good recovery.

The last interesting case of the group was a persistent and uncontrollable case of hematuria. The patient was edematous, the urine loaded with blood albumin and casts, her hemoglobin was 54%, and red cell count 1,680,000. Every effort was made, by keeping the patient in bed, to carry the child to the period of viability, but unsuccessfully; the condition grew worse. After consultation with Dr. Kreutzman, Cesarean section was performed at 6½ months.

General Indications.

Since Cesarean section is now the accepted method of dealing with all forms of fetal and maternal dystocia, every abnormal case becomes a potentially surgical one, and in the last weeks of pregnancy should be so considered. As we all know, the majority of women carry within themselves the normal mechanical conditions for a successful labor,—a normal sized fetus mechanically adjusted to a normal pelvis in a maternal mechanism capable of sustaining the metabolic processes within itself and its fetus through pregnancy and labor.

These cases give us no anxiety, particularly when they are multiparous and have proven by one or more preceding labors that they can bear its test. The abnormal cases form a group by themselves and should be carefully studied; and if the indications for a Cesarean are absolute, the operation should be an elective one at or near the time of labor. If the case is one of the border line type, then the patient may be permitted to undergo the test of labor with the understanding on the part of her physician, of the condition existing and his readiness to interfere with surgical measures, if at any point it is not safe to permit her to make further effort. This may be done with safety if the patient is kept surgically clean; the slightest infection in this stage means the possible failure of a Cesarean later. As few examinations as possible should be made after labor begins, and then under the most rigid precautions.

In the hospital care of our parturient patients, every precaution is taken both in the preparation of the patient and ourselves, as much so as in the preparation for an abdominal section. The external genitals of the patient are shaved and scrubbed with green soap, followed by lysol, everything coming in contact with the patient coming from the sterilizer.

The obstetrician's hands are scrubbed and covered with rubber gloves. On making the examination, the labia minora are carefully separated by the left hand, so that the examining finger does not carry anything from without into the vagina. During labor the vulva is protected constantly by sterile pads. If these precautions are carefully observed, the patient comes to the Cesarean operation surgically clean, and unless some unforeseen or accidental condition arises during operation, the results for both mother and child are assured. I would sooner run the risk of several hours of labor in testing the patient's ability to cope with some abnormality than the danger of one careless or unclean examination.

We are all agreed with Reynolds that the patient's resistance is lowered by long-continued and ineffectual efforts at delivery, and in the last stages of exhaustion, she is illy fitted to meet the exigencies of an abdominal section. It is good obstetrical judgment that makes the decision before her resistance is lowered; all the time her physician, while reaching this conclusion, is keeping her surgically clean, the one predominant thought being the maintenance of rigid asepsis, as few vaginal examinations as possible and no experimental manipulations if the possibility of Cesarean is contemplated.

Technic.

The details of the operation I have reduced to the simplest possible technic, rejecting every superfluous detail. The abdomen is painted with iodine 5%, after the patient has had the preliminary hypodermic of one-quarter gr. morphin and 1-125 gr. atropin. The anesthetic used is ether, drop method, the only abdominal operation in which I do not use nitrous oxide and oxygen. It seems that ether is safer, giving more complete abdominal relaxation than nitrous oxide. My anesthetist, Dr. E. P. Glover, has the patients under such psychic control that they are usually ready for me in 4 minutes from the commencement of the anesthetic.

The incision I make to the right of the umbilicus, about  $\frac{3}{4}$  above and  $\frac{1}{4}$  below, remembering that the abdominal wall is much thinner above the umbilicus than below it, and two or three strokes of the scalpel carries the incision through the peritoneum directly upon the uterus. I inspect the uterus and seek the median line, for the reason that there is so often a dextra-torsion. The uterine incision is made as high as possible in the fundus. If the placenta is encountered, it is either cut through or swept aside, the membranes are ruptured and with a gush of the liquor the child's presenting part is grasped, the child delivered, and placed in a sterile sheet held in readiness by an assistant on my left. One assistant is grasping the uterus with both hands through the abdominal wall, while my first assistant places a large moist gauze pad in the upper angle of the abdominal incision to hold back the intestines as the uterus contracts down. The cord is quickly clamped, placenta and membranes delivered, and the uterine cavity freed of any shreds.

The closure of the uterine incision is quickly begun. By this time the pressure of the assistant's hands, holding the uterus, has caused it to be delivered outside the abdomen, where it is surrounded by warm, moist saline gauze pads. I use a good sized curved Martin needle, large enough to penetrate the contracting wall down to the decidua with one sweep of the needle, and with linen thread making interrupted sutures, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch apart. As soon as the uterine sutures are tied the bleeding stops, I then place a row of Lambert sutures of fine linen thread over the first interrupted row, uniting the peritoneum completely so as to leave no points for leakage or adhesive areas.

There has been no trouble from infection with the linen, and no reason why it should not be left in the uterus, just as it is in intestinal and stomach suturing. We have but to watch the contractions in a uterus which has just been emptied to realize the great force that is exerted by the contractions and the pull that must be upon the ligatures. The strain of a future pregnancy must also be considered, and for the patient's security, it is absolutely necessary that the uterine scar be of uniform integrity. Catgut sutures may absorb too soon, or may become untied, leaving a raw area for adhesions, or a weak spot in the uterine wall. One postoperative Cesarean that I saw presented the unusual condition of the uterus fixed high up against the abdominal wall; the operator had used catgut, which I think had given way at some point, permitting a uterine fixation. It was an unfortunate sequela, as it prevented later pregnancies which the patient was most desirous of having.

After the uterine closure is completed, the abdominal wall is closed with unusual care, so as to have an unimpaired wall. I leave no packing in the uterus, and carry none down into the cervix; there need be no anxiety about the cervix being patulous, or sufficiently open for good drainage. With the powerful contractions of the body of the uterus, the cervix will always be pulled well open. Neither do I find the necessity of hypodermic injections of ergot, the manipulations while suturing the uterus are sufficient to cause good uterine contractions. Greatest care is exercised to touch the abdominal contents as little as possible. After closing the uterus it is slipped back into the abdomen, the intestines being barely exposed to view; the omentum is placed on the fundus, covering the intestines.

The time element is an important consideration in the Cesarean operation. Without haste, but with every movement well directed, I can keep the time required for the operation well within the half-hour limit, allowing 4 minutes for the anesthesia. My average time for delivery of babe is 3 minutes, 1½ minutes for delivery of placenta and membranes and freeing uterine cavity of shreds, 10 minutes for uterine closure, and 11 minutes for thorough layer closure of the abdominal wall.

DISCUSSION OF VARIOUS OPERATIONS

As to the different Cesarean operations advocated, none, I think, are superior to the classical Cesarean. The vaginal Cesarean will in time go the way of vaginal hysterectomy; it involves more time for its execution, and it inflicts more trauma upon the mother in the effort to deliver the child through the pelvic outlet. The abdominal route is more direct, quicker and cleaner. In only one case of toxemia did I utilize the vaginal route.

The claims for the extraperitoneal suprasymphyseal Cesarean section are now before the profession. In a masterly review of the extraperitoneal and transperitoneal methods by Nicholson, in "Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics,"* he elaborates the technic of Frank, Sellheim, Veit, Dorderlein and others, discussing at least twenty operations that have evolved by this method.

The indications as claimed by the advocates of this method are for the neglected, mildly infected cases. I can not see wherein are the advantages over the classic Cesarean, for the reason that the technic is much more complicated and prolonged, more trauma is inflicted, and large areas of cellular tissue opened up for fresh infection, all of which diminish the patient's resistance if already lowered by infection.

POSTOPERATIVE COURSE

The lying-in period is as a rule as uneventful as the normal case, with much less discomfort about the vulva than in delivery through the natural passages. Some of the patients have not known that there has been an abdominal incision until the time comes to remove the sutures. The health of the patients following the operation has invariably been good, there have been no retroversions, or sagging of pelvic contents, nor weak pelvic floor such as we sometimes encounter even with the best of care in our other cases.

Thus far, there have been only two patients who have been pregnant since their Cesareans; in one where the operation was performed for placenta previa, the second pregnancy pursued a normal course, and the patient delivered herself of a vigorous child without unusual difficulty. The other patient was brought to the sanatorium suffering from a violent hemorrhage  $1\frac{1}{2}$  years following her Cesarean for eclampsia. Examination showed a  $6\frac{1}{2}$  months pregnancy with placenta previa; a second Cesarean was promptly done to save her life, unfortunately it was too early for the child to be viable.

CONCLUSIONS

1. The necessity for the careful study of suspected abnormal obstetrical cases and the recognition of grave obstetrical lesions before labor sets in.
2. If operative interference is indicated, then early operation, before the patient is exhausted by ineffectual labor.
3. In the pre-operative stage, if Cesarean is contemplated, the avoidance of all intra-pelvic manipulations and the most scrupulous care that the patient be kept surgically clean.

SUMMARY OF CASES

1. Mrs. R., age 44, 1 para, Dec. 12, 1904. Multiple uterine fibroids, with albuminuria and profound toxemia developing in 33rd week of pregnancy. Abd. ces. sec. of twins. Eclamptic seizure followed operation. Both infants lived and mother made good recovery.

2. Mrs. B., age 36, 1 para, May 25, 1908. Placenta previa with profuse hemorrhage, full term. Abd. ces. sec., good recovery of mother and child.

3. Mrs. N., age 20, 1 para, congenital dislocation of both femora; undersized justo-minor pelvis. Elective abd. ces. sec., at full term. Living child. Mother made good recovery.

4. Mrs. P., age 27, 1 para, March 3, 1910, patient of Dr. Boldemann. Albuminuria with toxic eruption over entire body, edema of vulva so extensive as to render vaginal examination impossible. Abd. ces. sec., at full term, consultation with Dr. Spaulding. Living child, good recovery of mother.

5. Mrs. W., age 31, 2 para, April 28, 1910, patient of Dr. Cameron. Eclampsia, brought to sanatorium comatose with frequent convulsions. Urine by catheter showed 5% albumin, granular and hyaline casts. Abd. ces. sec., solely in the interest of mother; child moribund, mother recovered after stormy convalescence, the convulsions persisting for two days.

6. Mrs. L., age 35, 1 para, July 13, 1909, patient of Dr. Engle. Placenta previa, repeated profuse hemorrhages, consultation with Dr. Spaulding. Abd. ces. sec., living child. Good recovery of mother.

7. Mrs. S., age 24, 1 para, Nov. 18, 1908, patient of Dr. Engle. Albuminuria with eclampsia, patient brought in comatose state and in convulsions. Vaginal Cesarean section at full term. Living child. Good recovery of mother.

8. Mrs. P., age 32, 3 para, March 19, 1910, patient of Dr. Goss. Extensive cicatricial tissue in vagina from lacerations of two previous severe instrumental deliveries, in which both infants died. Patient weighed 215 pounds. Elective abd. ces. sec., at full term. Living child. Recovery mother.

9. Mrs. W., age 33, 2 para, March 2, 1911. Previous pregnancy twins with instrumental delivery. Extreme vomiting in early pregnancy became pernicious in sixth month, and patient went into collapse. Consultation Dr. Spaulding and Dr. H. Herrington. Abd. ces. sec. to save mother, the fetus non-viable. Patient in extremis, saline solution with adrenalin administered intravenously during operation. Good recovery of mother.

10. Mrs. J., age 28, 1 para, Oct. 16, 1911. Albuminuria with rapidly increasing toxemia, rigid cervix dilating but one finger after 48 hours of labor. Patient rapidly becoming exhausted by ineffectual efforts. Abd. ces. sec., at full term, living child. Mother made good recovery.

11. Mrs. B., age 25, 1 para, Oct. 24, 1911. Placenta previa, profuse hemorrhage. Abd. ces. sec., living child. Good recovery of mother.

12. Mrs. V. G., age 35, 2 para, March 23, 1912, patient of Dr. Stambach. Instrumental delivery fourteen months previously, after a four-day labor, followed by severe infection. During last weeks of present pregnancy cervix protruded through vulva. Irregular pains for several days, with dyspnea and evidence of cardiac strain. Abd. ces. sec., living child, recovery mother.

13. Mrs. M. A., age 16, 1 para, May 19, 1912. Undersized woman, justo-minor pelvis, rigid cervix, with ineffectual labor for 31 hours, eclampsia developed. Abd. ces. sec. Living child of nine pounds. Recovery of mother.

14. Mrs. C., age 40, 2 para, May 29, 1912. First labor instrumental delivery with extensive cervical and vaginal lacerations and resulting cicatricial tissue. Flat pelvis. Abd. ces. sec. Living child and recovery of mother.

15. Mrs. R., age 38, 1 para, June 18, 1912. Chronic endocarditis of extreme degree involving every valve, following acute rheumatism. Patient in bed during last weeks of pregnancy. Elective abd. ces. sec. at full term. Living child. Good recovery of mother.

16. Mrs. B., age 45, 2 para, Nov. 6, 1912. First labor instrumental, giving still-born child. Lacerations of unusual extent with cicatricial contraction of vaginal vault. Flat pelvis. Abd. ces. sec. at term. Living child. Good recovery of mother.

17. Mrs. C., age 24, 1 para, April 3, 1913, patient of Dr. E. P. Glover. Occiput posterior position. Abd. ces. sec. after 24 hours of severe and ineffectual labor. Living child, good recovery of mother.

18. Mrs. J., age 28, 2 para, March 14, 1913. Placenta previa in pregnancy at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  months with profuse hemorrhages; had abd. ces. sec. 17 months before for albuminuria. Abd. ces. sec. solely in interest of mother. At request of both husband and patient, Fallopian tubes severed close to uterus and distal and proximal ends embedded in folds of broad ligament. Good recovery of mother.

20. Mrs. B., age 20, 2 para, May 1, 1913. Pernicious vomiting. Abd. ces. sec. at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  months solely in interest of mother, child nonviable. Recovery of mother.

21. Mrs. C., age 23, 1 para, July 15, 1913. Flat pelvis, subjected to 36-hour labor test, then abd. ces. sec. Living child and good recovery of mother.

22. Mrs. B., age 25, 1 para, Sept. 1, 1913. Occiput posterior position. Ineffectual labor of 48 hours. Abd. ces. sec. Child and mother recovery.

23. Mrs. I., age 25, 1 para, Oct. 2, 1913. Brow presentation, rotating posteriorly; ineffectual labor for 36 hours. Abd. ces. sec. Living child, good recovery of mother.

24. Mrs. A., age 38, 1 para, Jan. 29, 1914. Patient of Dr. Boldemann. Multiple uterine fibroids, in which laparotomy was made in fourth month by Dr. W. I. Terry, attempted myomectomy, but deemed on inspection not advisable; pregnancy continued to full term, when Porro was performed. Living child and good recovery of mother.

Mrs. B., age 28, 1 para, Feb. 8, 1914. Accident in first month of pregnancy, fractured both femora. After repeated attempts by different surgeons to reduce the fractures, they were finally successfully operated by Dr. Hunkin, in the seventh month of the pregnancy. Patient was still in casts at expected time of labor, when abdominal portion of cast was removed and abd. ces. sec. performed. Living child, good recovery of mother.

26. Mrs. G., age 38, 3 para, March 18, 1914. Placenta previa, continual hemorrhages from the sixth month, growing more profuse. Abd. ces. sec. Child nonviable. Good recovery of mother.

27. Mrs. W., age 31, 1 para, April 16, 1914. Patient of Dr. Engle. Occiput posterior, rigid cervix and ineffectual labor. Abd. ces. sec. Living child. Good recovery of mother.

28. Mrs. C., age 21, 1 para, April 25, 1914. Albuminuria with persistent hematuria and general edema. Hemoglobin 54%, red cells 1,080,000. Abd. ces. sec. at 6½ months. Good recovery of mother.

The Price of Peace.—When two armies stand opposing one another negotiating for peace, each army makes the greatest possible show of strength so that it may get the best terms of peace. We are asking the old scrool to investigate our claims for recognition and peace. We have suspended hostilities, awaiting their decision. Many of them are ready and willing to investigate and ready to accept the truth. Many have long since got rid of their prejudice and bigotry; but a large number still stand off; they feel the absolute necessity of having us all with them, because of our numerical strength. They want medical unity, because it means legislative power.—Bulletin Mo. Inst.

THE PRESENT STATUS OF HOMŒOPATHY*

By Charles E. Sawyer, M. D., Marion, Ohio

In considering the question, "The Present Status of Homœopathy," it shall be my earnest endeavor to present facts, rather than theories; to show cause for professional differences in matters of creed; and to demonstrate that Homœopathy as a principle and homœopathic physicians as a distinct school have a particular use at this time.

Until the tenets of the homœopathic law have become recognized and utilized as a rational system of drug application in the curing of disease, homœopathy should be maintained as a distinct medical organization, under a specific title. To elucidate the subject and to show why it should be perpetuated as a separate school, it becomes necessary to review the subject from its early history.

The father of homœopathy, Samuel Hahnemann, was a genius, born with an instinct for investigation, illustration and application. Like all men of his type, he was aggressive, and out of his aggression and his determination grew opposition, at first only to his theory, and to his practice.

The investigations of Hahnemann soon convinced him that he had become possessed of a new truth, and in seeking to give that truth to the world, he crossed lines with the pharmacists of his day, whom the German government at that time were fostering, and this brought upon him the ill will of those who were selling drugs.

Hahnemann showed by the homœopathic use of medicines that crude drugs were not essential to curative results, and because of this financial loss to the druggists of his day, he was ostracised and persecuted.

It was Hahnemann who first demonstrated that an infinitesimal dose was a powerful dose. He showed that a drug's power of action was increased many times by the division of its molecules.

Thus, he proved that a tenth of a grain of calomel triturated with nine times its weight of sugar of milk, would have many times more influence than if given in the crude drug. He showed also that drugs had affinities for special organs and tissues of the body; that toxic doses of any drug presented a concourse of symptoms, which, if met by its simillimum in disease, would be overcome by a small dose.

For over one hundred years homœopaths were ridiculed for their belief in the infinitesimal dose. For a century opposing schools of medicine decried homœopathy, because it used and believed in small dosage.

For all these years homœopaths were supposed to be erratic. Note the conditions at present. The same individuals who belittled and decried homœopathy for its small doses in the past, are today acknowledging aggravation from doses so infinitely small that the most sanguine homœopaths hesitate in accepting the findings which are offered. Hahnemann lived 100 years before his time. As evidence of this, his theory of the infinitesimal dose stands pre-eminent.

It was Hahnemann who first advised removing the shackles from the insane, and it has required more than 100 years of energetic effort on the part of his followers to show that insane people are sick people who require humane treatment and careful scientific medication.

In this regard, even our great United States has not yet caught step with his advanced ideas; for even now in many of the United States our mentally afflicted are subjects of custodial care at public expense, rather than the beneficiaries of a sensible system of medical treatment.

It was Samuel Hahnemann who evolved the first practical idea of public sanitation and out of the thoughts he fathered, have finally come the laws of the present day in the prevention of disease by proper environments and corrective subsidiary conditions.

Had Hahnemann lived in 1914 he would doubtless have been one of the greatest of bacteriologists. He lived before the time of microscopes and the mechanical appliances of this day which make the way so easy for those who follow the light.

Hahnemann realized the germicidal theory long before bacteria were ever seen by microscopic eye. He had no mechanical powers to help him in locating specific germs. He had to read the physical signs by which the evidences of their presence were indicated, and so he applied his remedies according to the indications of specific, classified symptoms.

With the instinct of a genius he compiled these symptoms and classified his remedies with such definiteness of purpose that his associates and all of his followers have been able to select their remedies with precision and to prescribe them with most beneficial results.

Out of the darkness of his day came the professional light of the present. Unfortunately, like other great men, Hahnemann lived and died the target of opponents, opponents of influence. But while he has had enemies, and while he has been the subject of derision and falsification, he has also been the subject of emulation to many men and women, who rank high in the arts and sciences, and around him has grown up and developed the homœopathic school.

Hahnemann died recognized as one of the best physicians in all Germany, that, too, in a day when Germany afforded the best doctors the world knew. Hahnemann was not a novice, but an experienced, educated, broad-minded, intellectual man, and the inheritance of homœopathy by his followers is well worth consideration here. The work he started is yet unfinished, and until the world has acknowledged the correctness of the principles he evolved, until all humanity shall realize the superiority of homœopathic medication and homœopathic doctors, homœopathy shall exist as a separate and distinct organization.

At this time it seems pertinent to ask, What is homœopathy? In answering, it is not my purpose to give a technical definition. I hope to consider the subject in a practical way. I wish to convey to you my conception of what homœopathy is, and I do not wish to bind the profession in general to my own personal conclusions.

The same signs and symptoms that indicated the way when Hahnemann was prescribing drugs in the seventeenth century, are just as applicable to the choosing of drugs now.

Hahnemann lived, however, in a time when many of the things with which we are familiar now did not exist. Many of the diseases now prevalent in the land were not known then, for many of the afflictions of life are vocational afflictions, and out of these conditions have developed many things that have become strictly surgical, many disorders which can be overcome by physical means alone and some of which are still in doubt as to the absolutely correct remedy to be applied.

Mechanics have demonstrated and scientists have formulated many laws. Many definite fixed facts have come from the work of the men who have followed the direction of Hahnemann. Out of these have evolved the great principles by which the homœopathic doctor of medicine goes forth to meet the demands of the times. Many of the most serious afflictions of humanity have been eradicated and such as have not been absolutely eradicated, have been so controlled and are so centralized, and are so quickly and easily recognized, and are so easily prescribed for, that they have been robbed of much of their danger.

These changes wrought have not all been the work of the present generation. The possibilities of this day have been built upon the precepts of Hahnemann and Hahnemann's time, and homœopathy and homœopathic principles during the decades that have come and gone, since Hahnemann lived and died. All other schools of medicine have changed their forms of prescriptions and their methods of applying drugs many times. But the same rule, the same signs, the same indications, the same class of diseases, the same remedies are still used by the homœopath of today that were used by Hahnemann.

The difference between this hour and the hours when Hahnemann was fighting this battle at Leipsic and various other German towns in which he lived, and to which he contributed to the welfare of the race, is, that in this day the principle has been tried and so often proven that there is no longer question as to results.

We know now that the results he declared possible are substantiated by physical findings. The blood stream is known to be improved, its bacterial resistance greatly increased, and out of this, no matter what the disease, comes the beneficial results of any prescription.

What has homœopathy accomplished? Let us see. It has relieved the suffering public from the necessity of strong and dangerous drugging. It has stopped the clock of allopathic empiricism. It has brought to the senses of those who are looking for the benefits of drugs hundreds of remedies which may be prescribed intelligently and with definiteness.

It has taken out of mysticism and doubt many of the things which heretofore have brought us danger and risk and has put us upon a careful systematized, regulated, basis of administering drugs to a specific end.

This and many other things has homœopathy done. Out of the theories and beliefs of its originator have come much of prevention, much of supervision, much of change, much of good. Today the homœopathic physician of the land, where he is known and recognized, is regarded as one of the greatest benefactors of the race. So much for what has been done with homœopathy. Let us cast our horoscope and see what it contemplates in the future.

We all learn by our experience of the past; but for the errors and mistakes of those who have gone before, we would not know of our present needs. Out of our failures must come our success. From the present and past we must make comparisons by which we go forth to meet the future. Today the homœopathic fraternity is looking about in every direction, with all the improved means and methods at the command of this inventive age, to help them carry forward the truth of a real, practical system of medicine, where results can be counted upon unhesitatingly and definitely.

In the near future all drugs that heretofore have been given empirically, will be given according to the law of similars. Before we have reached another epoch in the practice of the healing art, the homœopathic fraternity will have shown to the world by scientific observation, by careful research, by the findings of an educated, intelligent fraternity, positive physiological and anatomical changes which may be brought about by the homœopathic remedy prescribed according to symptoms alone, and out of this will come the thing sought by all, viz:— homœopathic recognition.

The leaders in the homœopathic school are men far advanced in observation; far along in practical experience; thorough in their compilation of facts; careful in their keeping of records; systematic in their way of doing things, and out of this are growing every day proof of the great principle underlying homœopathic belief. And I assert that before another decade shall have passed, homœopathy will be recognized by all who have stopped to consider the applicability of medicine to the treatment of the sick, as the only real law upon which drugs can be dispensed.

It might be well for us at this time to consider who are the present day homœopathic supporters. Who are the standard bearers upon whom is devolving the homœopathic principle, who are in the vanguard of this great homœopathic army?

Here let me say that the homœopathic profession of today is made up of educated men and women. In the United States at this time there are in round numbers, 15,000 doctors, registered, regulated, recognized homœopathic physicians; numerically distributed proportionately over the entire United States, with a clientele of over seven millions of people who believe in it, who are in accord with the principles for which homœopaths are working, who know by close observation and by personal experience of the benefits that come from the homœopathic law.

It is being said by some of our contemporaries that homœopathy is practically dead. When I tell you that in the homœopathic ranks, among the every day practitioners of the United States, there are more homœopathic doctors than there are Methodist ministers, I believe that you will all agree that if homœopathy is dead, it could just as reasonably be said that Methodism is dead.

And when I say to you that the homœopathic school has within its ranks 15,000 homœopathic, practicing physicians, I can say to you also without fear of contradiction, that wherever they have tried their steel in fraternal combat, they have been shown to be equal in intellect, in ability, in heroism, in thoroughness, practicability, in up-to-date methods, to any and all who are practicing medicine and surgery in the United States.

And if you doubt that, I would ask you to visit the hospitals, colleges, and medical societies of the country and see comparatively what is being done by the homœopathic doctors of this day.

Besides doctors there are hundreds of trained nurses who have been instructed under homœopathic tuition, who have become grounded in the homœopathic faith, who by comparison know that out of homœopathic practice come the most glorious results. From homœopathic ranks have come some of the greatest surgeons of the country; some of the most progressive bacteriologists of the land. These are men who are being listened to, and are recognized as advanced men of the day.

It is interesting to contemplate our affiliations in colleges, in state institutions, in sanatoriums. In the state institutions which have adopted homœopathic principles, which have allowed the homœopathic physician equal rights in the effort to combat disease, he has demonstrated beyond question that his capabilities are always equal if not vastly superior to his coworkers.

In the insane asylum where comparative records are kept, where results are carefully tabulated and observed, in the penal institutions of the country; in the charitable institutions of the land, wherever, and by whomsoever homœopathy has been tried, it has proven itself equal to the exigencies of the occasion and nowhere has homœopathy been supplanted where public opinion had the right of way.

Politics in medicine, as in other things of state, sometimes brings dissension where none should exist and occasionally brings disgrace where honor should abound. It is said of us by some, who do not know, that we are going into financial decline, but I say to you that in the United States, we have as physical property rights, buildings and institutions owned and controlled absolutely by homœopaths and homœopathic patrons, hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property in the centers of our largest cities, in the United States ten colleges who have registered on their rolls of students a thousand of the brightest and best of the young men of the country. We have in our own library over 5,000 volumes of strictly homœopathic literature. We have 35 medical journals, propounding in each of their issues, the truth of homœopathy. When we consider what all this signifies, all may know that homœopathy is far from being defunct, far from being delinquent, and far from being liable to the necessity of forced liquidation.

All of this vast amount of property, all of this concourse of doctors and nurses, all of this living list of clientele, would amount to nothing if it were not possible to show that we are a working unit of great value to this great country of ours.

In 50 of the strictly homœopathic hospitals of the country, over 50,000 patients were treated last year, as bed patients, to say nothing of thousands of dispensary patients; and when I say to you that the mortality rate of these hospitals comparatively is more favorable than can be produced by any other school, and I say this without fear of contradiction, I believe you will agree that in the homœopathic hospital proposition alone, there stands one of the great living evidences of a very active, energetic, homœopathic fraternity.

When we stop to think of all of the homœopathic medical students who are now advancing along the lines of homœopathic principles, when we stop to consider that this rank and file of youth is coming forth to take their place in the general activities of a progressive world, we must agree that we have unquestionable evidences of perpetuity. In the United States at the present time we have over a hundred societies, homœopathic medical societies, organized bodies, with president, secretary and treasurer, all engaged in the promotion of the law of similars and in the general betterment of mankind. I believe you will agree that there is lasting evidence of a staple, intellectual, progressive organization of homœopaths, worth the support of you and your fellows in maintaining and keeping alive the principle for which homœopathic physicians have ever contended.

It may be asked what efforts are really being put forth by this great fraternity. Let me say to you that they are along the lines of modern research and investigative work in general diseases, medical and surgical. Out of our school are men far advanced, high in rank, standing in the most important of positions, seeking the truth, which ever adds to the comfort and welfare of mankind.

At the helm of many of the institutions of the country, standing as leaders in many of the sociological and civic organizations of the day are men of homœopathic education, men of homœopathic belief, men of homœopathic practice, men who believe in the homœopathic principle and the practical application of it.

The homœopathic fraternity of today is putting forth through their Council on Medical Education every possible effort to standardize and bring up to the highest degree of perfection, and the best administration possible, all of the hospitals that are working under homœopathic banners.

It was the homœopathic fraternity who first set the pace for the higher standard of medical education. It was the homœopath who fixed the high standard of rules for admission into their colleges, who increased the requirements of the medical fraternity. It is that same great fraternity that is now standing for the belief that it is possible to walk so straight that you may fall over backwards; and so, instead of carrying out their ideas in a dogmatic way to an unreasonable extent, they believe that there is a limitation to what can and may be done in the way of requirements of the medical students.

Homœopathy has always stood for freedom; it has always stood for the principles that go to the making up of a great influential, helpful body, and they stand today for the highest and broadest and best in education; but they condemn with vehemence self-constituted autocracies which have a tendency to limit and restrict the privilege of the healing art to a particular and a specified few.

Out of the common herd of humanity come the greatest of men, so we as homœopaths contend that any man, who has the natural instinct and endowments, with reasonable preparation, should be admitted to our colleges, and out of these colleges should come all that should be required by our government of these students, so that they should be able to practice their profession anywhere within the domains of this great country of ours.

A lot of the legislative rules and regulations that have been adopted and are being executed are absolutely ridiculous. They really do not mean a higher standard, they only mean a more circumscribed rule and regulation by which a certain few seek to promote themselves and to become masters of a situation for which they are incompetent.

I am opposed, absolutely opposed, to the restriction of medical legislation that takes from any man, who has a reasonable education and who has the will and disposition, the moral character and the intellectual right to become a student of medicine, from practicing anywhere he may elect, after having once been passed upon by a recognized college. And if you will send good young men to the medical colleges that are now in existence in the United States, under the name of homœopathic colleges, affiliated with some university of rank, there never need be any fear but that credit will resound and rebound to them and you.

Our colleges of today are being urged to become affiliated with the leading universities of the country, and they are becoming recognized as strong, organized, modern, up-to-date institutions. The universities in various states have accepted homœopaths as a great part of their medical training and this goes to make up all that is good of the medical doctor of the hour.

We are asking of our colleges that they bring forth men of such grade, rank and ability, that there can be no question when they are tried in the fire of actual experience, as to their proving true and capable.

We believe that there is a systematic, organized plan of education which is necessary to meet the requirements of the hour and we are establishing that in every homœopathic college in the country. We are seeking men who are capable of doing the things necessary to the promotion of the interests of the modern, homœopathic doctor, and in the upbuilding of the homœopathic doctor of the future, we believe that we are bringing about one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. We are willing to compare our colleges with any of the institutions of learning of like kind of any school.

The proof of a medical education is in the practical results, by the bedside, in the field, before the public, wherever public health and public sanitation are on trial. In all this we know that the homœopathic physician of the day is equal to any competitor whatsoever.

Now, what do homœopaths seek? They seek the general recognition of their law. What I mean by recognition is, that those who are opposing us and who are attempting constantly to absorb us or to eradicate us shall admit that we are not hypocrites; that we have not been misrepresenting the truth, but that we have been promoting a great principle to which sufficient credit has not been given. We want to be known among the doctors of the land as men entitled to respect for assiduity of purpose to an end, which has had the benefit and welfare of our fellow men always at heart and which is capable of great good.

And when we have substantiated, as we believe we have, by all the proof that could reasonably be asked, that we have a law, that we have been standing for a truth; that we are practicing a principle, which is now and always has been worthy of consideration; we ask that we be recognized as being worthy the title of homœopathic doctor and this title should stand as a commendation to all associated.

The principle for which we have been contending is the principle that involves the life and health of you and yours. We have been fighting the same battles that have been fought by every other physician in the world, who has been marching on toward the general betterment of the human race, and we want to be known as having founded our belief upon a principle which has stood the test of time, and we want the laity, the people who have not stopped to consider whether their doctor was homœopath, allopath, eclectic, or what not,—we want them to know that there is a real difference between the homœopathic physician and the physician who does not practice according to the homœopathic law.

We want them to know that medical statistics, comparative statistics, under all conditions and circumstances, have shown, beyond the possibility of contradiction, that the law similia similibus curentur means more than just a title. It means the application of a definite means to an end; it means the difference between the man who knows and the man who guesses. It means the difference between scientific application and empirical employment; it means the difference between cure and disastrous consequences. It means through a policy and a principle that does not fail to relieve the public of a lot of the liabilities and dangers of diseases to which they are constantly exposed.

We want the laity to know that the homœopath believes first and foremost in the removal of causes; that he is a broad-minded, a generous spirited, a big hearted, a conscientious, moral, upright, straightforward man. These are the policies upon which he bases his practice, and we want all to know that all of his principles and characteristics are fortified by a specific law in medication, that puts him beyond question into the highest rank as doctor of medicine.

We want the world to know that homœopathy does exist, that it is a specific principle, that it is living, that it is active, that it is energetic for the good of mankind; that it has improved from the time it was promulgated by Samuel Hahnemann back in the 18th century up to the present time until it has finally become the surest, the most scientific and the best form of practice of medicine extant.

Discussion

Dr. Burton Haseltine, Chicago: A discussion of Dr. Sawyer's address must necessarily commend its scholarly character, its sincerity and the completeness with which it presents the subject. There can be little difference of opinion regarding the truth of what he says, for most of it is a matter of history. The history of homœopathy and much of its good work is now tolerably well known even to its opponents.

Indeed, when I study our present situation it seems to me that homœopathy is suffering from too much history. Dr. Sawyer's able address is itself an illustration of my meaning. It shows much skill in pleading for justice chiefly to the past. Too much honor cannot be given to Hahnemann and the others who established the homœopathic school. But all those men are dead—and neither doctors nor laymen today are much interested in dead men. The public now desires and needs to know, not so much of what the fathers did, but of what homœopathy is doing now and can do in the future.

We need publicity—of the honest, aggressive, modern sort—organized, coöperative publicity. We homœopaths carry our individualism too far. It is splendid for the treatment of sick people, but poor treatment for ailing organizations.

In this we have much to learn from our colleagues of the other school. They don't succeed well with the individual, but in handling the mass they are experts. They excel as organizers and promoters. They spend no time in worrying about the reputations of bygone men, but give skilled attention to the reputations of those still living.

I say this not in criticism but in respectful commendation. When the world knows more about the work of good doctors and good medical institutions while such men and such institutions are still alive, it will be better for both profession and public. I therefore hope in future to see less literature devoted to the work of past generations and more to the work of Dr. Sawyer and men of his type.

Dr. C. J. Loizeaux, Des Moines, Iowa: One part of the paper that struck a chord in my heart is that in which you propose this long rigmarole, that a man has to go through so many colleges, back door and front door, before he can be admitted to a medical school. I say we will soon have no poor men in the medical colleges. It is all right for the young men with plenty of money and time, but the boys who have to make their way from the ground up, whose parents cannot put them through the higher course, will often make the best doctors. I think we will find the best doctors are those who made their way, and those who were not able to get the B. A. or B. S. or some such thing at the end of their names. Consequently, I am in full accord with Dr. Sawyer's paper. I like the old time way of studying with a doctor. Ladies and gentlemen, if we still did that, we would have homœopaths in all that the word implies.

Dr. E. Petrie Hoyle, London: Dr. Richard Haehl came over to this country and graduated. He went back and found a moribund lay society of about 2,000 members. He had a lot of Yankee grit, the fire brand we call it in England. He started to lecture throughout the southern part of Germany, and they soon had 13,500 members.

They have no rich people, but it is by their marks and marks and a half and five marks that they have bought a tract of several acres of ground on the top of one of the most beautiful hills in Stuttgart, and have collected money well into six figures for a large hospital, which will be up to date. Therefore, I beg of you when you go out east and west, that you start lay societies in every community, and let them work silently for you and the cause altogether.

Why Not?—It was a strikingly pertinent question that the little fellow who wanted to get into the open air school room put, when he plaintively queried, "Gee, how sick does a feller have to be before he can get into that fresh air room?"

That little boy has voiced a query that deserves serious consideration. Why open window class rooms for the weaklings only? Why not fresh air rooms for all the children, both sick and well? Is it not a sorry comment on room conditions when we get recruits for the open air classes from the children in the rooms that are supposed to be clean, safe and sanitary in every way? In other words, the question may well be asked, Why not give the well children the same opportunities to get their rightful share of fresh, life-giving air that are provided for those whose already weakened physical condition makes it impossible for them to live and carry on their studies under the usual school room surroundings.

Finally, should this little boy, or any little girl or boy be forced to get sick before they can have provided for them the conditions that make for bodily health and vigor and which will also tend to keep them well all the time?—Bulletin Chicago Board of Health.

Is Tag Day Worth While at this Price? Whoever it was who developed a scheme for public begging for funds, usually by the exploitation of the charms and winning manners of young girls, should be heartily ashamed of the system so much abused in the name of doing good.

Mothers of daughters may be able to blind themselves to the real object in placing girls in the market place, there to accost strangers, men and women, with a plea for help for their charity. Fathers are not unaware of the part that personal charm plays in the sale. If they think, they will object to that form of charitable work for their daughters.—Evanston News.

SPONDYLOTHERAPY.

What It Is and What Is Claimed for It.

By G. C. Dominick, M. D., New York City.

Spondylotherapy is that method of treating disease which is concerned only with the excitation of the functional centers of the spinal cord by certain measures such as tapping, pressing, etc.

Osteopathy is that method of treating disease which is concerned with anatomic abnormalities and their correction. Its nosology is a lesion, its symptomatology a subluxation.

Chiropractic is that method of treating disease by which the pinching of nerves passing through the intervertebral foramina is relieved, this pinching being due to displaced vertebra.

Chiropractic differs from osteopathy in these respects: (1) The hands are used in a different manner and the movements are dissimilar; (2.) The etiology of disease is unlike that accepted by osteopathy. Chiropractors adjust for more diseases than osteopaths and the results are immediate.

Spondylotherapy: By so treating every organ is either dilated or contracted. Spondylotherapeutic treatments are given as follows:

For exophthalmic goitre. Rapid concussion over the 7th cervical spine twice daily and rapid concussion over the 2nd lumbar spine once daily. Concussion lasts 1-2 minutes. Concussion over the 2nd lumbar spine is to tone up the ovarian region which is often affected in these cases in young girls. The ovarian region is supposed to play a part in these cases. The concussion over the 7th cervical spine tones up the vagus. Pressure over the 7th cervical spine causes eyeball to recede, and pressure over space between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spine will cause the eyeball to bulge forward. One case of enormous goitre was cured by concussing the 7th cervical, 5th dorsal and 10th dorsal vertebra.

For aneurism. Concuss 7th cervical vertebra for 3 minutes. Treatments last 1 minute each and you must rest for 30 seconds between treatments. In another case of similar diagnosis, concussion over the 7th cervical vertebra for 5 minutes in one-half minute séances and intervals of one-half minute were employed. Concussion over the 10th dorsal vertebra will dilate aneurysm, while concussion over the 7th cervical vertebra will contract same.

For malaria. Concuss 2nd lumbar spine and drive plasmodia into circulation by contracting spleen. Sometimes must concuss 1st 3 lumbar spines. Concuss for 30 seconds for 6 times, resting a few minutes between treatments.

For diabetes mellitus. This disease is often associated with goitre and reaction of vagus tone so that treatment directed towards increasing tone of vagus will help this disease. By this treatment, you will at least establish more tolerance of carbohydrates. Hold head slightly forward to overcome discomfort of concussion of 7th cervical vertebra. All these measures cause contractions of blood vessels, so don't over-treat.

For constipation. Concuss 2nd lumbar spine, causing contraction of intestines. Concussion of 11th dorsal spine causes dilatation of intestines. Sometimes pressure with instrument will do this when concussion fails. Diagnostic point.

For distress at climacteric, menopause and puberty. Concuss 7th cervical spine.

For locomotor ataxia. Concuss 10th dorsal spine very rapidly, which will dilate blood vessels of cord. This treatment will not expel pains, but will improve gait. In a case shown by Dr. Abrams, at Chicago, where I took a course in this line of work, after this treatment, a man suffering from locomotor ataxia did certainly improve in walking.

For glaucoma. Concuss 7th cervical spine and decrease pressure of eyeball 50%. Opposite result will occur by concussing 10th dorsal spine.

For appendicitis. Pressure over the 5th dorsal spine will allow of passage of rectal tube beyond sigmoid flexure, thus admitting of cleaning out of colon. This may cure, or at least relieve.

For enlarged liver. Concuss 2nd and 3rd lumbar spines.

For differentiating between cardiac and bronchial asthma. If bronchial, pressure over the 7th cervical vertebra will increase rales; but, if the asthma is cardiac, pressure over the spaces between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines will increase rales. Pressure between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines will decrease rales in bronchial asthma and pressure over the 7th cervical spine will decrease rales in cardiac asthma.

For vomiting of pregnancy and seasickness. Press between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines. The benefit does not last long in seasickness.

For increased blood pressure. Concuss between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines.

For nephritis. Concuss 10th dorsal vertebra, which will lessen the amount of albumin thrown out in the urine and improve vision.

For esophageal spasm. Pressure upon the 7th cervical spine and esophagus contracts, while cardiac orifice opens. Pressure between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines opens esophagus and closes cardiac orifice. Pressure between the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines produces anesthesia of esophagus and throat.

For phthisis. If seen early, concussion over the 10th dorsal spine will increase the red blood corpuscles from 100,000-500,000. Such cases have been cured in from 6-8 weeks.

To elicit points of tenderness on certain spines, press them all one after the other. When the spine which governs a certain lesion is found, that spine will be found to be tender. The significance of this is to find the spine to treat in any lesion such as neuritis. In such a condition, rapid concussion will stop the pain for many minutes.

Discussion

Dr. Dieffenbach: I am very much interested in Dr. Abrams' work and have read his book and looked up several points on this subject. I believe it is a neglected part of a necessary examination. Muscular spasms, subluxation, etc., of the spine should be looked into. A young man was sent to me with a negative diagnosis of tuberculosis and asthma. I could not find cause of cough, which occurred while dressing in the morning and continued throughout the day. X-ray showed no aneurism or cavity of lung, but revealed vertebræ out of line, which I believed was the cause of the cough. I gave treatment around the sixth and seventh cervical vertebrae, both superficially and deep. After the second treatment, the cough stopped and has not reappeared. This, therefore, has seemed to open up a new field of cure, for medicaments do not always cure. Mechanical treatment will often do away with the cause, as in the case above, no doubt due to pressure on the vagus nerve.

SOME PRACTICAL RESULTS OF SPONDYLO- THERAPY.

By Edward Sylvester Smith, M. D., Bridgeport, Conn.

As the theory of spondylotherapy has been presented to your notice by another member of this organization, I shall confine my remarks to the relation of its effects on a few cases.

Early in my use of the methods of Abrams, I came upon a case of chloasma which had resisted other treatment, and was willing to try this. The patient was a woman of 32 who had suffered an injury to the spine years ago by falling backward into a bath tub. Chiropractic treatment had been tried without benefit.

The chloasma was very marked on the face and forearms when she came to me. Examination of the spine showed tenderness from the 3rd to the 6th points of the dorsal area. The date of the first treatment was May 24, 1913. At this time the 5th and 6th dorsal spines were concussed for six half minutes with the same intervals of rest between. This was continued daily at home, and in a week she reported again. Later the 3rd, 4th and 5th dorsal spines were treated, and also the 2nd lumbar.

On June 16th, the chloasma was much better. Another physician who had seen the case before treatment was much surprised at the result. A month later there was an aggravation of the condition during an attack of dysentery, but there followed another period of improvement. As I lost track of the case, I cannot report the present condition of the patient, but because of the marked improvement during the treatment I think the outcome would have been good if the treatment had been pushed.

In cases of acute coryza, I have seen more rapid and satisfactory results follow the use of concussion of the 7th cervical spine together with medicines, than I could expect when medicines alone were prescribed.

A case of severe intestinal colic occurred on two different occasions in the same patient. Concussion was given and rubbing of the lower dorsal and upper lumbar spines, in conjunction with other measures, with the result of speedy relief. What part the spinal treatment had in the result, I am unable to tell.

A case of Raynaud's disease in a woman of fifty, which developed a year before I saw the patient, was treated by this method with some advantage, but I cannot report a cure, as the patient discontinued the treatment.

The right shoulder, arm, and hand were first affected, being painful and slightly stiffened. Later both upper extremities were affected. When seen by the writer, both hands and all the fingers were cold to the touch and cyanotic. Medicines, together with static spark, were first tried without much result. Then the 6th and 7th cervical spines were treated by slow concussion, sixty strokes in thirty seconds, with intervals of rest. During the first treatment the fingers become warm and pink. She was instructed to continue the treatment at home daily, and report. The condition improved in that the circulation in the hands and fingers was much better though the pain was not relieved. The treatment was varied by rapid concussion of the 3rd and 4th dorsal spines, but, as before stated, the absence of the patient prevented a continuance of the treatment to a satisfactory issue.

A case which I reported elsewhere is of interest because of the permanent cure of a visual symptom. A lady of 34 years who wore prisms for muscular asthenopia was found to have several tender points in the cervical region. These were concussed and vibrated and soon she developed diplopia. She was sent to her oculist for another prescription, and a slight change was made without affecting the double vision. Then the glasses were discarded, with the result that the diplopia was relieved and vision was good. She has not resumed the use of glasses, though several months have passed since the treatment. Severe headaches from which she had suffered were also relieved and there have been very few returns of this symptom.

In the treatment of goitre by this method, I have not had the results reported by others, but my experience is limited to two cases, and these were doubtless of the fibroid type which is not amenable to treatment by concussion. One case in a girl of eighteen was helped, but not to the degree that I had hoped.

A case of dilatation of the left ventricle with a murmur at the base of the heart was treated by concussion of the 7th cervical, with the result that the murmur disappeared with the first treatment and so far as I know has never been detected since. The action of the heart was improved by the treatment.

Abrams' method of freezing in neuralgia, I have used with signal success when all other measures failed. One case may illustrate the method and emphasize the result. The case was that of remittent fever in a man of sixty-seven. The symptoms were early controlled by our usual remedies, so that by the 10th day the temperature was normal. Then, owing to activities that were not sanctioned by his physician, there was a relapse, which was more severe and much less amenable to treatment than the original attack. In the course of this relapse a severe intercostal neuralgia developed, which resisted all remedies, and was only controlled by hypodermic injections of morphine. The demands for relief of pain were so insistent that I feared the patient might become addicted to morphine. It was at this juncture that I determined to resort to the freezing method of Abrams.

The site of the most severe pain was to the left of the spine from the 4th to the 6th dorsal vertebrae. This area was frozen by means of ethyl chloride, the result being immediate relief from pain. After the effect of the freezing had passed there was a return of the pain at points adjacent to the original site. These were treated in the same manner with the same result, excepting that after the third or fourth freezing there was no return of the pain.

In subsequent cases of neuralgia I have not employed ethyl chloride solely, owing to its cost, but have followed the custom of Abrams in beginning with the ethyl chloride, and then substituting the ether spray. The rationale of this method is explained by Abrams as follows: "The local application of cold probably acts as a shock, thereby diminishing the conductivity of the nerves and annulling the functions of the centers of the cord. The sensory nerves are paralyzed, with loss of sensibility."

Of the use of spondylotherapy in diagnosis, I have said nothing, because my experience has been more in the direction of therapy. However, I believe that there is a rich field for its use in the diagnosis of disease. The recent application of the method to obscure chronic states unlocks some of the most difficult problems of diagnosis, and opens the door to success by an earlier discovery of the real condition.

Discussion

Dr. King: I feel distinctly benefited by these papers and the discussion, for I had only picked up a few points personally from Dr. Abrams' book and I am glad to learn these additional facts which have been so clearly set forth.

Dr. Edward Wyman, Manchester, Vermont: In two cases of aortic stenosis, I discovered a displacement of the third cervical vertebra. I gave the neck a twist, thus replacing the vertebra and since then there has been no tachycardia or fainting. A second case showed lordosis of spine and I relieved it by bending the patient forward and lifting the trunk at the same time. As a result, the lordosis was diminished and health was established inside of four months.

Dr. Robert L. Walter, Walter's Park, Pa.: I also had a case of aortic stenosis. The patient was not able to sleep and chloral and bromides had been given. I stopped these and gave the patient a small dose of aconite. Immediately his insomnia disappeared and soon the stenosis became unnoticeable.

Dr. Blake, Philadelphia: I had a patient with neuritis in shoulder, constipation along with a persistent headache. I got no results at first but the constipation greatly improved and I was able to relieve the arm condition. I found that the third cervical vertebra was responsible for this trouble.

Dr. Franklin F. Massey, Wernersville, Pa.: A little girl of nine years of age had trouble with her spine causing a toe to stand up, ataxic drag to one foot and hands were useless. Spinal treatment helped this greatly, and now there is no drag to the foot and she has good use of the hands, although the toe still stands up.

Public Health as a Career: Maryland is looking for men to fill positions created by the sanitary district bill passed at the last legislature. New York state is in the market for a large number of trained health officers. North Carolina employs eleven whole-time country health officers at salaries that attract capable men irrespective of residence. Sooner or later all the states will exert that control over hygienic and sanitary conditions which a few now exert, and this will mean an ever increasing demand for public health officers to give their entire time to the community. Already some educational institutions are coming forward with special courses to train men for the new work. The "School for Health Officers" of Harvard is sufficiently well known, and at least five American universities—Harvard, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin and Tulane—now grant the degree of doctor of public health for special public health work over and above the requirements for the regular medical degree.—The Medical Record.

THE DIAGNOSTIC AND PROGNOSTIC SIGNIFICANCE OF ALBUMINURIA*

By G. C. Birdsall, M. D., Washington, D. C.

While the subject of albuminuria has been thoroughly discussed at other sessions of this Bureau, I am taking the liberty of presenting again this important subject in hopes that the discussion will bring out some point which has not been touched upon previously.

You will all agree with me that a correct diagnosis is desirable before beginning treatment in any disease. Especially is this the case in renal diseases if the best results are to be obtained. The accurate study of the urine has become one of the most essential features in advanced clinical medicine. Through urinalysis alone many diseases can be determined, their intensity can be gauged and their progress toward recovery or a fatal termination be predicted. Of course, it is not possible to diagnose every disease by an examination of the urine, but there are few serious diseases that do not in some manner change the character of the urine and therefore we can no longer exclude a urinary analysis from the scientific investigation of any serious form of disease.

If we were to examine every voiding of urine from every febrile case we treated during the year, we would find albumin present in a much larger proportion of those cases than might be expected. The albumin appears in the urine under varying conditions. In some instances it is due to a disturbance in the excretory cell which permits a transudation of serum albumin directly into the uriniferous tubule from the blood. In other instances, the albuminuria appears to be due to some change in the structure of the albumin in the blood, permitting it to pass directly through the renal tubules. In other words, the blood serum filters directly through the wall of the tubule. It is supposed that this increased diffusibility is due to the action of toxins on the albumin or in some instances to the direct action of the bacteria in the blood. It is this latter form of albuminuria which we meet most frequently in febrile disorders when the urine will contain a trace of albumin but no casts. These albuminurias disappear with the decline of the toxemia and no trace of renal disturbance is noticeable afterward. I am of the belief that many cases of albuminuria appearing during pregnancy without the presence of casts are due to the changes produced by the toxins upon the serum albumin in the blood.

In determining the presence or absence of albumin, the technic is important. In some cases a small amount of albumin is of much more significance than a large amount under other circumstances. I regret to say that the small trace of albumin is too frequently overlooked by the profession at large. I have seen doctors find albumin when it isn't present at all. Several months ago a doctor came to me with a specimen of urine for examination. He said the patient seemed perfectly well, but that sometimes he found a large amount of albumin in the urine and at other times there was none, and that he could not understand the cause. Inquiry regarding the tests he employed showed that he simply boiled the urine without adding any acetic acid, and my deduction was that sometimes the phosphates precipitated and at other times they did not, depending entirely upon the reaction of the urine at the time of testing. The man's urine was perfectly normal. This may seem a very simple mistake in technic, but one that is commonly made along with many others as foolish.

For the detection and estimation of considerable amounts of albumin, I prefer the potassium ferrocyanide or picric acid solutions, both of which are familiar to you. For the detection of small amounts of albumin, which is of much greater importance, I use several different methods. The first essential in the technic is to get a clear urine. A faint trace of albumin will be overlooked in most contact tests unless the urine is perfectly clear. In warm weather when the urine is apt to become cloudy before it reaches the laboratory or where there is being collected a twenty-four hour quantity, I prefer to supply the patient with a little formaldehyde solution which he adds to the sample collected. A few drops suffice to keep the urine clear and in good condition until it can be examined. The nitric acid test, commonly known as Heller's test, has many disadvantages and is not as delicate as the two tests which I am about to mention. Like Heller's test, both of these are contact tests and are both accurate and precise. The first is a twenty per cent solution of sulphosalicylic acid. About three cubic centimeters are placed in a test tube and the urine is flowed over its surface. A white ring at the point of contact will show any albumin which might be present. This test I consider a very delicate one and very simple to use. The second is known as Ulrich's test. Ulrich's reagent consists of a saturated solution of sodium chloride, to which is added glacial acetic acid to two per cent. When filtered it is ready for use. About five cubic centimeters are boiled in a test tube and the urine flowed over its surface while still hot. Albumin will be precipitated at the line of contact. I think the great advantage of both these tests is that only one ring is formed at the point of contact, whereas with Heller's test other rings, such as the pigments and uric acid contents, may be so close to the point of contact that they obscure the fine ring of acid-albumin. Comparative tests made with urine, to which known quantities of blood-serum had been added and diluted, showed albumin rings with the two tests last mentioned after Heller's test gave negative results. For detecting faint traces of albumin at the point of contact or for noting the degree of turbidity, a suitable background is necessary. I find a piece of black carbon paper answers this purpose very nicely, and I keep a piece of it pasted up in my laboratory in a convenient location.

When the urine is very cloudy, it is impossible to filter it clear with filter paper. I treat these urines with a little five per cent potassium hydroxide solution; heat gently, but not boil, and then filter. The urine can then be used as any clear urine.

After albumin has been found in the urine, its possible source must be considered. Albumin does not necessarily come from the kidneys. In men a common source of albumin is the prostate gland and urethra. Albuminuria generally accompanies cystitis and is always found whenever blood enters the urinary tract, whether due to inflammation or traumatic causes, such as gravel or calculus. In women, a leucorrhea is the most common cause of small traces of albumin. These outside influences have to be eliminated before making accurate deductions. A small amount of solids with a few hyalin casts, large amount of urine with low specific gravity, decreased urea and increased chlorides make the diagnosis of chronic interstitial nephritis. These cases can be helped in the early stages of the disease and perhaps its progress can be materially influenced, but how many cases there are that are never diagnosed until the clinical symptoms are so marked that there isn't the slightest doubt about the diagnosis. I am making a plea for more careful urinary examinations by the general practitioner. The common method of making a test for albumin and sugar amounts to almost nothing. If he has no microscope, the doctor can make a careful chemical examination, and when he finds a faint trace of albumin, a sample can then be forwarded to someone who is prepared to make a complete analysis.

It is not easy to say just what your kidney cases are going to do next. The relations the kidneys bear to other organs and the influence they may have over the kidneys, is a very delicately balanced mechanism. The heart and the tension of the blood in the arterioles have almost as much to do with the excretion of the urine as the kidneys themselves. The urine can be increased by hypertension and diminished to a marked degree by hypotension.

The presence of albumose in the urine has been a source of interest to me for a number of years. You will often notice that a specimen of urine which you have boiled and added acetic acid contained no albumin, but when the tube was put aside and allowed to cool, the urine becomes cloudy. This cloudiness will disappear, however, when the urine is heated again. This precipitate is albumose. I have noticed that this substance generally accompanies any irritation of the urinary tract, such as is found with oxaluria and indicanuria. A few casts often accompany this condition and disappear with the albumose when the source of irritation is removed. Albumose is seldom seen in chronic nephritis, either interstitial or parenchymatous.

I have been surprised and have endeavored to explain why some people with a chronic parenchymatous nephritis live so long. I have now under observation several people who have been passing a large amount of albumin and many hyalin and granular casts for years and seem as well today as when I first saw them. One man I have had under my care for ten years. He passes a large amount of albumin and casts are profuse, yet he seems in perfect health and his urinalysis is not one bit worse than it was ten years ago.

I do not advise giving too prompt a prognosis in renal cases. It is better to keep them under observation for some time and make frequent urinalyses. You can then judge the effects of your treatment and give a much more accurate prognosis.

Summary:

1. Examine the urine of every patient you treat.
2. Search for slight traces of albumin, as they are generally overlooked.
3. Do not depend entirely upon the examination of one voiding, but examine a twenty-four hour specimen or several different voidings.
4. Do not depend upon the nitric acid test alone. There are others more accurate and equally simple.
5. Albumin with the presence of casts indicates renal disturbance. Albumin without casts may come from some source other than the kidneys.

TOO MANY GODS

The German God is asked to bless
The outcome of the war;
The Russian God the Slavs confess,
With prayers to guide their star.

The Frenchmen, if they have a God,
Have doubtless done the same;
The Austrian God is asked to nod,
And free them from all blame.

The Briton asks his God to stoop,
While he goes out for pelf,
But if denied, he'll "loop the loop,"
By praying to himself.

These many Gods with war-like looks,
Are worshipped with a whoop;
Too many Gods, like many cooks,
Make hell-broth of the soup.

Let us beseech the GOD of Gods
To grant us lasting peace,
By making all these minor Gods
Their warring efforts cease.

DISCUSSION OF DR. KRAUSS' PAPER THE DEFINITION OF HOMŒOPATHY*

The Organon represents the directions for only one method, the homœopathic method of cure, homœopathy, which, according to Hahnemann himself, is the curative method of symptom-similarity, applicable by direction, implication and the logic of facts to curable diseases of noncomputable medicinal elements, and whoever would profess before the world an intimate and faithful knowledge of homœopathy must make this definition of Hahnemann's his own: Heile durch Symptomenähnlichkeit, cure through symptomsimilarity. [Concluding paragraph in Dr. Krauss' paper.]

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York City: You will remember that on one occasion the Roman Senate sent to Tiberius Caesar and asked him to report on the state of the Roman nation. He wrote back, "What to write you, may all the gods and goddesses destroy me if I know." Our friend Dr. Krauss has gone so extensively, so learnedly and so scientifically into the discussion of this non-important subject, that I am quite at a loss to know how to approach him. A man once said a grasshopper hears through his legs, and to prove it he put a grasshopper on a board and tapped on the board, and the grasshopper jumped off the board. He then pulled the legs off the grasshopper, placed him on the board and tapped on the board. The grasshopper did not jump off the board. From this he concluded that the grasshopper hears through its legs.

Now, I don't doubt, Mr. Chairman, that we have in "homœopathy" a looseness of description, a failure to accurately and scientifically define many times, not only what homœopathy means, but what is meant by the practice of homœopathy. I had occasion recently to investigate the literature to prove by induction and deduction a certain hypothesis, and I was impressed by the broadness of the statements, the failure on the part of many witnesses who allege homœopathic cures. I was impressed with their failure both to describe in scientific language the nature of the disease sought to be cured, and also the failure of the witnesses to enumerate sensibly and completely the symptoms upon which the prescription was made. It is not enough to get up and simply say, "I cure diphtheria by the administration of mercurious biniodide." You must first describe why you think it is diphtheria, show that an examination was made, a culture taken, a test made, and the diagnosis established, and then must demonstrate the particular symptoms upon which the mercurious biniodide was prescribed. Then you have prescribed scientifically.

A patient in the Flower Hospital had malaria. He had chills and fever, and our prescriber thought we would have to resort to quinine. An examination was made, and the plasmodium found. Eupatorium was administered. The next day no chill. At the end of the week the plasmodium disappeared. That was a cure—a scientific demonstration of the cure of a definite disease by the remedy.

But it seems to me when we come to the consideration of a definition, and something which after all is purely doctrinal, we are apt to indulge in very fine hair splitting. It is an unfortunate fact that many unimportant doctrinal differences have divided homœopathy into many camps. It would be an unfortunate thing if we divided over this question of the definition of homœopathy. When one interprets a law, it is often necessary to go back to the intention of the makers of the law. You have to study history to find out what the men meant when they made this law; and history is a very uncertain proposition. I remember I was shown in Bonn two houses in which Beethoven was born. Unless he was twins, I don't see how that could be.

What did Hahnemann mean? When I lived in Michigan a great distiller died, and the next Sunday a Methodist preacher said, "Hiram Walker has gone to hell." That was quite sensational, and upset the community; the papers sent the reporters around to find out the destination of the Walker train. He went to Doctor Stewart and said, "Dr. Smith says Hiram Walker is in hell. What do you think about it?" He replied, "I don't know where Hiram Walker is. Neither does Dr. Smith." I don't know what Hahnemann meant, neither does Dr. Krauss. It is a pretty difficult thing to go back one hundred years and find out what a man meant by this thing or that. I admit Dr. Krauss knows a lot more about this than I do. I admire and respect his erudition, but as far as I am concerned, I do not care whether homœopathy is an art, or a science, or a method, or a bridge. I have learned that a rose by any other name is just as sweet, and I do know Samuel Hahnemann has given us a means of cure, a method of therapeutic procedure and if it makes him happy, I am going to leave it to Dr. Krauss to give the definition.

Dr. John L. Moffat, Ithaca, N. Y.: I don't quite agree with Dr. Copeland, and he does not agree with himself, because I know he does stand for homœopathy. Evidently what he meant to say was that facts count. Facts are essential, and we know the facts in the case of the cures and the success of homœopathy when we practice real homœopathy, the way we were told to practice by Hahnemann, and the way we have been doing it for one hundred years. But the intelligent man, after he has been given the facts and has applied them, does ask some questions, and the intelligent man ought to be able to give an explanation when asked. Some can recall when homœopathy meant ostracism. I can. Today many of us are invited to join allopathic societies as homœopaths. Homœopathy is already recognized by some of the old school leaders. The two schools are coming together. I do not say they are fusing—they are coming together. I expect to see it in my day. The way they are getting together is that their societies, as well as all scientific medical men, with here and there an exception, are going to recognize that homœopathy is a scientific method of selecting the curative remedy. We have found in the past in homœopathy (just as in everything else in this world) that excessive assertions can readily be punctured, to the detriment of the whole cause. We used to claim there was no cure except the homœopathic cure. Today, if we are scientific physicians, we claim homœopathy to be scientific medicinal therapeutics; we must claim only what we can demonstrate. One of the things that homœopathy has suffered from is that our clinical reports have been mere assertions; they should be demonstrations. When asked what is homœopathy, we should all have essentially the same definition. I have stopped saying curantur because that bubble has been pricked. We should unite on curentur. While I agree with Dr. Krauss that Hahnemann was talking about symptomsimilarity, and that similia similibus curentur may apply to likes which are not symptom similars, it is my custom to say, if asked what is homœopathy, "Homœopathy is the reason why the physician selects his homœopathic remedy, which cures through symptomsimilarity—similia similibus curentur."

Dr. Frank Loomis Newton, Boston: Thanks are due to the writer of this paper for the very ardent and earnest work he has put into it, and the energetic method he has chosen to impress it upon us.

Let us come to some definition that is acceptable to the majority of us, and then we shall have cleared up one obstacle. Our scientific education is as good as that taught by any other school. With the addition of the knowledge of homœopathy and its practice, we shall be far ahead. The personality of the men today in this institute who are joining the Surgical Congress and who have joined the American Medical Association—the personality of these very men will do more in that American Medical Association than anything else we can do. If we ever bring the old school into a knowledge of homœopathy, we shall do it by putting such men into their colleges to teach what we believe and have proven. Then we can make them understand it, and not until then can we bring about that affiliation and fraternity which appeals to all broad minded men and women in medicine.

Dr. Krauss (closing the discussion): For anybody in this twentieth century of ours, and especially for an apparently scientific man of the type of my friend Copeland (and he is my friend) to say that definitions are of no consequence—I want to be very mild—is really unpardonable. A definition is at the basis of every knowledge we have. Until we can define a thing, we do not know it. The definition is the knowledge of the thing. To say that the definition of homœopathy is of no consequence is equivalent to saying that homœopathy is of no consequence. In homœopathy Hahnemann discovered an integral part of scientific medicine. If Hahnemann were to come to us today he would not recognize homœopathy in most of the things that go by the name of homœopathy. To say that no man knows what Hahnemann meant is to say that the human mind is incapable of perception and association. Because Dr. Copeland has faced all the mistakes of the English translators of the works of Hahnemann he thinks that nobody can know what Hahnemann meant. Hahnemann was definite. He lived not in the seventeenth century, as some one had remarked, nor in the eighteenth century only, but also in the nineteenth century, and the larger part of the first half of the nineteenth century, a most important period of modern science. I can not find in all his writings that he had any interest other than his homœopathy. He was a man of one idea, he grasped it, worked it out and presented it to the world; it is complete; and my friend Copeland, or any other man living, must not say that it makes no difference what it is, that it makes no difference how homœopathy is to be defined. We may quarrel over similia similibus curentur and curantur; these are wind-mills that have occupied the minds of the profession for a hundred years, but there can be no quarrel over homœopathy.

Hahnemann made homœopathy an integral part of medicine; made it so exact and so complete that no avalanche of snow or ice or water can throw it out of the history of medicine; took the term "homœopathy" from Aristotle, Plato and Strabo for his medical idea of pathologic similarity, and no other similarity is homœopathic. He used it, and made homœopathy nothing else than a method of cure. What is the difference between a rule and a method? Perhaps we do not recognize that there is a difference, but there is a vast difference. We may modify a rule, but we can not modify a method without making the method lose its identity. The modified rule will stand as a rule. The modified method will not stand as the method. A rule is a conclusion. A method represents an experimental relation obtained by philosophic analysis.

It is time for us not to let our fools guide us any longer. To say we will define homœopathy as we please, will be to continue in the foolish steps we have been walking in for a hundred years. The justification of our existence is the justification of homœopathy. One says he does not care whether homœopathy is a science or a method or a rule—it is all the same to him. The first mark of a scientific man is the power of discrimination. Unless we discriminate between what is true and what is false, there can be no scientific progress. My friend Dr. Moffat would like to have similia similibus curentur stand. As a tolerably good natured man, and as a man who likes to exchange courtesies, I should like to please him; but this definition of homœopathy is not a matter of pleasing ourselves or our friends; it is a matter of knowledge—a matter of what Hahnemann meant, what he did and what he bequeathed to us for safe-keeping. He defined his homœopathy and no other man has a right to define it. We may define the issues that we make, but we may not define the issues that another makes. We may define the homœopathy we practice, but we can not define the homœopathy that Hahnemann discovered and gave to us in his Organons. We can not make the definition when he makes the definition, and I believe we ought not to allow other men, who are not quite as serious and as well grounded as they should be in the knowledge and practice of medicine, to perform for us the service that only men of science can perform. We can make homœopathy what it really is. Homœopathy is an integral part of scientific medicine. I had the good fortune to exhibit it as such for the first time, and I am going to present it as such until you accept it. The amendment to be voted on tomorrow tells Hahnemann's story. It tells the story of homœopathy, and we should know homœopathy as it is, and not as we for various reasons wish it to be.

DISCUSSION OF DR. COLEMAN'S PAPER VERIFICATIONS*

The growth of our school must depend upon its practical results rather than upon purely theoretical discussion, which too often unnecessarily complicates the homœopathic principles by introducing visionary flights of the imagination originating in some romantic mind. Our work lies in practical demonstration, and this work must continue. A good cure does more than hours of purely abstract argument. [Opening paragraph of Dr. Coleman's paper.]

Dr. Guy B. Stearns, New York City: You have heard other papers, but it seems to me this paper excels them all, because the cases prove more to you than any laboratory work. I have three cases to add to this list. The first was a girl who had taken seven tablets of bichloride. She went the usual course of these cases. I gave her at first, then kali chloricum without result, and went back to old Hering and found silica was the antidote for mercury. I gave her a few doses of the 200th, and the improvement was the most remarkable thing I have ever seen. In a few days she got worse again; she appeared to be in a desperate state. The nurse said, "Her breath is cold, the nose is pointed, she looks as if she is made of wax." The remedy was carbo vegetabilis, and she responded wonderfully.

Another case—heart disease—the murmur was functional. On the symptom that she was obliged to walk around, I gave her tarantula.

Another case of angina with heat of the head and cold extremities, juglans cinerea was the remedy.

Dr. E. Petrie Hoyle, London: It is distinctly refreshing and very encouraging to hear a paper like this. It is practical work.

I want to speak of crategus. If you find a crategus case and the drug does not work, change your druggist. An old pharmacist told me the trees should be marked in the spring; the white haw is the only one that will do any good; the red will fail every time.

*Verifications. By Daniel E. S. Coleman, Ph.D., M. D., New York. JOURNAL AMER. INST. HOM., page 229, September, 1914.

As to palliation; no one elaborates the question of palliation better than old Dr. Burnett. He has written twenty-seven monographs. He says the remedy now and again will seem to palliate and not cure. He teaches us to search further for the cause, and suggests that an organ is at fault. He classifies a group as "organ remedies." (If they cure, they are homœopathic to the case.) Sometimes a patient has many symptoms chasing each other; if you find it is liver trouble, choose a liver remedy, and all the symptoms will disappear, as if by magic.

Dr. Stearns: That is a good point of Dr. Hoyle's. If the body does not respond to the apparently indicated remedies, there is an organ at fault holding back the cure.

Dr. Edwin Lightner Nesbit, Bryn Mawr, Pa.: Whether our work be "experimental" or "clinical," we must have verifications at the bedside to make it of practical value. The "deadly parallel" between drug and disease pathogenesis thus shown will do more to conclusively demonstrate their complementary relationship and therapeutic usefulness than any amount of theoretic discussion. Papers of this sort—presented concisely and without minutiae imperative in the original records—are of convincing value.

Dr. Alexander L. Blackwood, Chicago: I appreciate the paper very much, and think it is a climax to this most excellent bureau.

Dr. Stearns: I recall a case of cough that was very troublesome; finally I found by urinary examination that there was about two or three times too much uric acid. What remedy do we have that gives this sort of condition, that is, uric acid, fatigue, dark urine? Rhus toxicodendron. It fitted the case and cured it. Since that time when I find a uric acid case that does not show the symptoms for anything else, I use rhus.

Dr. Coleman (closing the discussion): I was glad to hear that Dr. Stearns concluded that the young girl's heart lesion was not organic. A systolic murmur was heard at the apex and transmitted under the left scapula. I felt reluctant to claim that it was organic, although it would appear so. In regard to bichloride of mercury poisoning, I had two cases this spring. The interne prescribed hepar sulphur for both, and both cases recovered.

REMEDIES HOMŒOPATHIC TO CHOLERA

Arsenic—cramp, vomiting and purging and suppression of urine; so similar is cholera to arsenical poisoning that cases of poisoning have been mistaken for cholera.

Veratrum album—violent vomiting and purging with early collapse.

Camphor—in presence of an epidemic, as prophylaxis; especially for the early stage or for loss of strength, coldness, mental foreboding, before the cramps, purging and vomiting come on.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Reported by the Secretary

On October tenth the following members of the Board of Trustees assembled at Hotel La Salle in Chicago in response to the call issued by President Miller and published in the September and October issues of the JOURNAL: Drs. Miller, Baxter, Mosher, Smith, Horner, Carmichael, Sutherland, Hinsdale, Cobb, Reily, Sawyer and Hobson.

Since the Atlantic City session, various communications have been sent the trustees relative to New Orleans, Portland, San Francisco and Chicago. The claims of each of these places, as well as those of Long Beach were ably presented, each by a different individual. In the final ballot, Portland, Oregon, received a majority of the eleven votes cast. The formal invitation to Portland was endorsed by the Commercial Club of Portland, the Portland Chamber of Commerce, Oregon Development League, Executive Department at Salem, Oregon, Tacoma (Wash.) Commercial Club and Chamber of Commerce, Spokane (Wash.) Chamber of Commerce, Seattle (Wash.) Chamber of Commerce, and the Colorado Homœopathic Medical Society.

Work of the Council on Medical Education was also reported upon. The hospital work in Kansas City is well begun. Mr. Arthur Warren Smith is again in the field for at least six months. The opportunities of re-enforcing the college work already begun in Missouri and Ohio supplied additional impetus for putting the finances of the Institute upon a sound business basis.

The dates chosen for the Portland meeting are Tuesday, July 6, to Saturday, July 10, inclusive.

Tuberculin in Incipient-Tuberculosis: It must be remembered that it is upon the similitude of the pathogenesis of tuberculin to tuberculosis (i. e., its homœopathicity) that its curative action depends. But in these days this fact must be restated in current parlance. Nowadays "immunity" is the hypothesis which sums up all the arcs into the completed circle, and in turn, reduces that completed circle to an approved medical square. What was aforesaid known among the homœopaths as an "aggravation" is now approved by the "regulars" as the "negative phase." We once obtained "improvements" which lasted a greater or less length of time. To be "scientifically correct" now we must allude to such as the "positive phase," i. e., when the "opsonic index" is high. The comfortable fact remains the same, however, that the patient is benefited regardless of the change of nomenclature.—McElwee, Med. Century, Sept., 1914.

EDITORIAL

The Place of Meeting, 1915. As published in the Minutes of the Institute session at Atlantic City, the Board of Trustees upon the recommendation of its Committee on Place of Meeting and its Finance Committee named Long Beach, Long Island, as the place of meeting in 1915. As plainly set forth in the reports of these two committees, this recommendation was based upon the desire to increase the financial resources of the Institute, so as to relieve the membership of the voluntary subscriptions which have been solicited heretofore for the purpose of carrying on the various activities associated with the maintenance of high-grade work in our colleges and in specific publicity work.

Twice upon the floor of the Institute the membership present asked the Trustees to reconsider the place of meeting and expressed a wish that Portland, Oregon, and New Orleans be taken under consideration, after consultation with the incoming officers.

The successful business management of the Institute requires that the place of meeting be determined as early as possible. To that end the October meeting of the Trustees was called, with a majority vote of the members present for Portland, Oregon.

Open letters from members of the Finance Committee, 1913-1914, appear in the department of Correspondence. The columns of the JOURNAL are open to any other comment.

The attention of the members of the Institute is called to the announcement of the Business Manager upon the Publisher's page of this issue, and also to the preliminary announcement of Dr. Costain, Chairman of the Transportation Committee. S. M. H.

Random Thoughts on the last Meeting of the Institute. In the future it seems to the writer certain routine features of our Institute meeting should be corrected in order to make them more attractive, and preferable.

1. Has the time not come when it is possible on the night of the opening to do away with the long-drawn-out speeches of welcome? These speeches in the larger number of instances are purely perfunctory and meaningless so far as the Institute is concerned, are utilized in the vast majority of instances for the purpose of advertising the town in which the meetings are held, and are remembered by the members present chiefly because of the fact that they consume so much time as to weary the audience before the president begins his address. Suitable music, Divine invocation and a brief address of welcome from the chairman of the local committee are quite sufficient.

2. The scientific program is too often seriously interfered with by the time consumed in transacting the business of the Institute which could be much better cared for by the Board of Trustees. The writer remembers attending but very few sessions of the Institute which were not also seriously interfered with by the close proximity of the exhibitors to the rooms in which the sectional meetings were held. This year at Atlantic City the scientific meetings were almost spoiled by such proximity.

3. The scientific program was also seriously interfered with because of the vicious air in the rooms in which the sectional meetings were held. Physicians are the most inconsistent men and women in the world in that they are constantly preaching the virtue of fresh air and plenty of it, while remaining in rooms during scientific sessions in an atmosphere so vitiated that even the most wideawake cannot keep from dozing while the most interesting papers are being read. In the future every effort should be made to secure, first, quiet rooms and, secondly, rooms so ventilated that an abundance of fresh air may be had at all times. Electric fans can be rented at but small cost and should be utilized when necessary.

4. It must have been evident to the most casual observer who attended the Atlantic City meeting that there has been a great improvement in the tone and character of the scientific papers presented. It must also have been evident that the younger men of the Institute were in no small measure responsible for this improvement. The younger men, therefore, should be pushed to the front and given every opportunity to press their claim for recognition and for official preferment. The writer attended none of the sessions, except those held under the auspices of the Bureau of Homœopathy and the Surgical and Gynecological Association. He was more than delighted with the splendid program prepared by each of these associations. The time was all too short for the reading and the thorough discussion of many valuable papers presented. In the future the time given to the several sections should be practically unlimited. Some of the most interesting of the papers presented to the Bureau of Homœopathy could not be read until the very last minute when it was too late to give them more than scant justice. The Surgical and Gynecological Association should in the writer's opinion be given carte blanche regarding the time necessary for the transaction of its business and the reading of its papers.

5. As usual, much valuable time was consumed because of the prolixity of some of the essayists and speakers. The future chairmen should see to it that men and women without suitable terminal facilities be provided with the same. It is unfair to the majority of the members present to have a few men on their feet upon any and all occasions who have no conception of the agony they inflict upon their audience. J. C. W.

Homœopathic Therapeutics at the Exposition. In a correspondence from June twentieth to September first, Dr. James W. Ward, a member of the Board of Trustees, has asked that homœopathic physicians might co-operate towards the proposed exhibit in medicine and surgery at the Panama Pacific Exposition, and that they be represented on the staff of the emergency hospital, since there will be many people visiting the Exposition who believe in homœopathy and who may need attention.

Those who witnessed Dr. Ward's executive ability in the session of 1910 will easily believe that he has secured as large a measure of recognition as could have been secured by any member of the profession. The two following paragraphs delineate the present situation. The first from Dr. Ward's letter to Surgeon R. M. Woodward, of the Exposition Emergency Hospital: "Inasmuch as during the Exposition period, homœopathic medical care may be desired by some in attendance, I beg to request the selection of a homœopathic physician, subject to your approval, to give such service. I will assume to make the necessary arrangements for a physician on call night and day, to give such care as may be required in accordance with the request of the patient, irrespective of your Emergency Service. It is understood that the appointee shall attend gratuitously while the patient remains in the Exposition Emergency Hospital." The second from Dr. Woodward's reply: "As decided at the time of our conference, the address of this physician will be left with us, and in case a patient is admitted who expresses a desire for treatment by a homœopathic physician, a telephone message will be sent to the doctor designated by you. If for any reason there is delay in his arrival, and the case is urgent, we will have to apply such emergency treatment ourselves as we deem proper."

More generous treatment was accorded the guests at the World's Fair in Chicago, where each school of therapeutics recognized by the State Board of Health was represented in the Emergency Hospital service. But this fairness of representation occurred in a city characterized by a neighboring journal as "the most intensely and aggressively commercial city of the world." However, with adequate publicity, travelers at the Panama-Pacific Exposition ought to be able to secure the medical service desired. S. M. H.

The establishment of the School of Homœopathic Medicine at the Ohio State University has called forth a column of hysterical dissent on the part of a journal of wide circulation. It is strange that such a journal cannot command the editorial service of some one better informed in medical history and the therapeutic value of homœopathic principles.

In the report of the Joint Conference Committee, Dr. Craig is quoted as writing that the Evans Memorial made no reply to his letter of inquiry touching the systematic investigation of the homœopathic principle of drug selection. In response to the direct inquiry whether this request was ignored, Dr. Sanford Hooker, under date of Sept. 29, 1914, writes: "Dr. Richardson, Medical Director of the Evans Memorial, did receive a letter from Dr. Craig. . . . In reply to the same he told Dr. Craig that the proposition, as stated, was not definite enough to be seriously considered, and therefore he could not give a definite reply."

The Monthly Retrospect of Homœopathic Therapeutics, in the Hahnemannian Monthly, conducted by Dr. Donald Macfarlan, is a valuable contribution to the record of homœopathic therapeutics. The Lippe papers, which by good fortune have come into the possession of Dr. Macfarlan, are an important item in this budget.

---

"Drugless therapy" is the phrase of the hour. Just now it is well to recollect that here also, we, as a body of medical practitioners, have the advantage. Homœopathic therapeutics is neither drugless therapy, nor yet that therapy which "must make you worse before it makes you better." The minimum dose that will do the work, the avoidance of the dose that gives aggravation of symptom-group, the use of the drug that has striking, peculiar characteristics, based upon the study of the effects of these drugs upon the healthy body, the single remedy, when practicable, the repetition of the dose at as infrequent intervals as will effect the desired result constitute a reasonable working basis for internal medicine.

Dr. J. R. McCleary of Cincinnati, the recently elected Managing Editor of the Journal of Ophthalmology, Otology and Laryngology, announces the reorganization of that journal with the purpose that the publication shall be to this specialty what the Journal of the Institute is to the general practitioner, that the journals may serve each other and further the interests of that body of medical workers who believe in homœopathic therapeutics.

The New Maternity Building at Boston University

The contract has recently been awarded for the erection of a new Maternity Building at the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital, which, when completed, will provide one of the largest hospitals of its kind in this section and add another noteworthy building to the already large list of special hospital buildings.

The Out Patient Building, at the corner of Harrison Ave. and Stoughton St., will be used as the site, and the existing one-story walls will be utilized in the erection of the handsome five-story structure.

The funds for the building are provided by an un-named philanthropist, and the plans are being made by Kendall, Taylor & Co., Hospital Architects, of this city, in cooperation with William O. Mann, M. D., the Superintendent of the Hospital.

The ground, first floor and most of the second floor will be utilized by the Out Patient Department, greatly increasing the already efficient and rapidly growing service. The entrance on Harrison Ave. will be devoted exclusively to this department. The entrance to the Maternity Department is from Stoughton St. and nearer the general offices of the main hospital. At the entrance is a memorial hall, which will be finished in a manner befitting its uses. From this room are elevators and stairs to the upper floors. A portion of the second floor will be used for the examination rooms of the Maternity Department.

The third floor will be devoted to Ward Patients, the fourth floor to semi-private patients, and the fifth floor to private patients—a total of 82 beds for mothers alone. There are also rooms for internes and externes, and each of the maternity floors will be equipped with large nurseries for the newly arrived babies. There will be a large solarium on the Stoughton St. end of the building, and it is proposed to utilize the roof for a garden in the warmer months.

Particular attention has been given to the arrangements for toilets and accessories for the patients, and to obtain the quiet rest necessary; also to the delivery rooms, of which there is a suite on each floor.

Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association the President, Dr. A. C. Tenney, made the following appointments, all of which were approved by the Committee:

Legislative Committee

Chairman, Dr. A. C. Tenney. By special recommendation and vote of Executive Committee.

Drs. Samuel E. Parr, Ottawa; C. A. Frazee, Springfield; Rhoda P. Barstow, Gilbert Fitzpatrick, Jos. P. Cobb, W. Henry Wilson and Clifford Mitchell, Chicago.

Extra-Mural Committee

Drs. N. Starr, Charleston; C. E. Colwell, Aurora; W. N. Honn, Springfield; Nash, Galesburg; W. E. Neiberger, Bloomington and Grant Houston, Joliet.

Press Committee

Drs. Burton Haseltine and Sarah M. Hobson, Chicago.

Banquet Committee

Drs. R. H. Street, Jos. P. Cobb and G. M. Cushing, Chicago.

Member of Editorial Staff of Clinique

Dr. A. E. Smith, Freeport.

Bureau Chairmen

Clinical Medicine, Dr. A. H. Gordon, Chicago.

Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Dr. Leroy Thompson, Chicago.

Surgery, Dr. Julia Strawn, Chicago.

Materia Medica, Dr. A. L. Blackwood, Chicago.

Obstetrics, Dr. P. M. Dondonville, Dwight.

Gynecology, Dr. B. A. McBurney, Oak Park.

Sanitary Science and Hygiene, Pediatrics, Homœopathy, Neurology, Psychology and Electrology. [To be announced.]

Dr. Clifford Mitchell presented a communication relative to a Committee on Efficiency and Economy that has been appointed by the State Legislature to make recommendations on matters pertaining to public health, sanitation and food inspection. After a very careful consideration Dr. Wilson presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Whereas, a committee on efficiency and economy has been appointed by the Legislature of the State of Illinois to make recommendations on matters pertaining to public health, sanitation and food inspection, and,

Whereas, it has come to the notice of the Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association that such recommendations contemplate the appointment of a board having power over a variety of matters not strictly belonging to public health and sanitation.

The Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association protests against the recommendations of the committee on efficiency and economy:

First: Because the business of licensing physicians, pharmacists and nurses can be more efficiently carried on by an examining and licensing board;

Second: Because the proposed law makes no provision for the protection of the interests of the two hundred thousand tax-payers of the State of Illinois who employ medical practitioners of the Homœopathic School of Medicine;

Third: Because the examining and licensing of physicians and nurses and pharmacists has been a source of income to the State, therefore the examining and licensing board can be maintained without financial burden to the State;

Fourth: Because the limitation of the appointive powers of the Governor and transferring of a part of the same to an unnamed organization looks neither to efficiency nor economy.

Furthermore: The Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association is not opposed to the unifying under a single board of all matters pertaining to public health, sanitation and food inspection, provided that matters foreign to such service are not injected into the duties of said board.

The Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association wishes further to convey to the Committee on Economy and Efficiency the information that this organization is not opposed to the organization of a State Examining and Licensing Board for physicians, on which all schools of medical practice in Illinois shall be represented and on which no one school shall have a majority and whose action shall not be subject to review by any other board.

THE SPECIAL TRAIN—1915

The Board of Trustees having voted that Portland, Oregon, should be the place of the next meeting, the Transportation Committee will get up the usual special train leaving Chicago. In order that we may not cover the same ground as in our previous trip to the Coast, we contemplate going by way of the Canadian Pacific, stopping at St. Paul and Minneapolis for a few hours, then through to the Canadian Rockies where we will spend two days at Banff, Glacier and Field, the points best suited to see the wonders of the mountains, then on to Portland. Any of you who have never seen the West nor tasted its wonderful hospitality will be enchanted with the country and its people alike. This is a great opportunity to see much of your own country in your own train, carrying your own party. Your friends who want to see the Exposition in San Francisco will be welcome to go with us; in fact, we urge you to make it a point to have them go with us so that we may have a bigger train and by force of numbers carry a greater prestige for our organization. Begin planning for the trip now and write us for literature of the trip to get posted on the wonders to be seen. Of course the World's Panama Exposition in San Francisco will be part of the trip and you will all want to go there after the meeting is over. This is a western year. See the great wonders of nature along the way. Anyone wishing to spend an extended vacation can go to Yellowstone National Park, the Yosemite Valley or take a trip to Alaska on your way back.

Leave Chicago 7:00 P. M.

By those who know its charm the route between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis has been titled for twenty years or more "THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER SCENIC LINE" where Nature smiles—three hundred miles. This will be readily understood when one comprehends that for almost the entire distance from Savanna, Ill., north, the rails are within sight of the majestic Father of Waters, with a broad, island-dotted expanse on the one hand and bluffs—real, heroic heights—on the other. For many miles the tracks are so close to the river's edge that a child might easily toss a pebble from the car window to the water.

Nearly seventy years ago, George Catlin, the celebrated delineator of Indian life and customs, resting at Fort Snelling after a canoe journey up the Mississippi, wrote these words of the scenery through which he had just passed: "All that can be seen on the river below St. Louis, or for many miles above it, gives no hint of the magnificent scenes which are continually opening to the eye of the traveler, and riveting his attention through sunshine or storm, from the mouth of the Wisconsin to the Falls of St. Anthony. In ascending the river, one will see but little picturesque beauty until he arrives at Rock Island; but from that point he will find it growing more interesting all the way to Prairie du Chien. From thence to Lake Pepin, every reach and turn in the river presents to his eye magnificent scenes of grandeur and beauty. From time to time the eye is fixed in admiration upon the thousand bluffs which tower in majesty on either side, and change, as the river bends, into countless fascinating forms. These scenes, and the charm of Lake Pepin, between whose grandly turreted shores one passes for thirty miles, will amply repay the tourist for the time and expense of a visit to them." Not only is there this magnificence of scenery, but every mile is replete with historic and legendary interest.

Arrive St. Paul 8:00 A. M.

St. Paul, the capital city of Minnesota, is set on seven hills extending back from the Mississippi River, which sweeps in an immense crescent through the city, between beautifully colored bluffs. Travelers say that neither Constantinople nor Edinburgh can afford more marvelous civic views than may be gained from the historically-famous Indian Mounds, which rise in a river-bluff park; from the dome of the magnificent State Capitol, from the splendid new high-set Cathedral, or from the skyscrapers on the business plateau at the base of the hills.

The unusually magnificent capitol, libraries, scientific museum, art gallery, municipal auditorium (seating 10,000), parks, boulevards, public band concerts, make it an exceptionally pleasant place to live in or to visit.

The visitor can "do" St. Paul quickly if he desires. Extraordinary general views may be obtained from the easily-accessible eminences; speedy and comfortable trips can be made by carriage, taxi or street cars to the beautiful lakes and parks; guides take one through the really splendid capitol with its nationally-famous paintings of historic scenes.

Special Points of Interest.

- Trip 1 Minnesota State Capitol.
- " 2 Como Park, 400 Acres.
- " 3 City Hall, Post Office, Armory.
- " 4 Summit Avenue.
- " 5 Indian Mounds Park.
- " 6 Ft. Snelling, U. S. Gov't. Reservation, 2,331 Acres.

Inter-City Service.

St. Paul and Minneapolis are connected by several electric lines. The more interesting rides are: Lakes Como and Harriet and the Seventh street line, which with a few minutes' walk permits one to visit Fort Snelling and Minnehaha Falls. Cars run every few minutes, making the trip in fifty minutes, and the fare is ten cents.

Arrive Minneapolis 11:00 A. M.

Minneapolis is a well built, rapidly growing city, occupying a rather level plateau fifty-three square miles in area, lying on both sides of the Mississippi about the Falls of St. Anthony. The city owes its existence largely to these falls and the development of their great water power has been one of the chief factors in the city's wonderful growth. No one thinks of Minneapolis without thinking of its vast flour industry. The various mills clustered about the falls turn out annually about seventeen million barrels of flour, which find a market in every part of the world.

Minneapolis is not only interesting from a commercial standpoint, but it is a beautiful city with well kept streets and avenues, a fine park system and as charming environs as may be found. Visitors will find the usual sight-seeing conveniences, including automobiles, taxicabs, carriages and an unexcelled street railway system.

Special Points of Interest.

1. The flour mill district and St. Anthony Falls, which are within walking distance of all leading hotels.
2. Minnehaha Falls and Ft. Snelling, which are accessible by street car with a five-cent fare.
3. University of Minnesota. East bank of the Mississippi, just below the falls, ten minutes by car from the business district.
4. Public Baths at Hall's Island in the river and at Lakes Calhoun and Harriet.
5. Lake Minnetonka, half hour's ride from the city by two railroads and trolley.
6. State Fair Grounds and School of Agriculture, half hour's trolley ride from the city, fare five cents.
7. Soldier's Home, adjoining Minnehaha Park.

8. Lake District, including Harriet, Calhoun, Cedar and Lake of the Isles, twenty minutes from the business center by trolley through residence district.

Leave Minneapolis at 2:00 P. M.

Leaving Minneapolis via the Soo Line we traverse the lake regions of Minnesota and the rolling prairies of North Dakota, crossing the international boundary line at Portal early the next morning.

Leave Portal 8:45 A. M.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is used from Portal through to the Pacific Coast and its palatial steamers from Vancouver to Victoria and Seattle.

Passing through the vast wheat growing prairies of the Canadian Northwest, where new towns are springing up almost daily—short stops will be made at Moose Jaw and Calgary.

Leave Calgary 7:15 A. M.

Shortly after leaving Calgary, the ascent to the mighty Canadian Rockies begins and then, for over 600 miles a continuous panorama of bewildering magnificence is presented—majestic mountains, snow capped peaks, startling precipices wondrous glacial fields and peaceful valleys. "Fifty Switzerlands rolled in one" is the expression used by world travelers in describing the magnitude of the Canadian Rockies.

Arrive Laggan 9:00 A. M.

At 9:00 A. M. the drive will be made to the Lakes in the Clouds, three miles distant.

LAKE LOUISE—Of the beauty of Lake Louise there is no divided opinion; every visitor to its shores sings its praises and it is acknowledged by the most competent judges to be one of the great masterpieces of nature's handiwork. As a gem of composition and coloring it has no rival.

Situated on the verge of the water is the Chateau Lake Louise.

From Lake Louise it is an easy ascent to Mirror Lake and Lake Agnes, which nestle among the clouds, encircled by majestic peaks.

Leave Laggan 5:00 P. M. and Arrive in Field 6:10 P. M.

SPIRAL TUNNEL—Between Laggan and Field, near the summit of the Rockies, one of the greatest engineering feats of the century has been accomplished. To reduce the steep grade of the western slope of the Rockies, the line has been lengthened and two immense spiral tunnels have been driven through the solid rock, each tunnel with approaches making a complete loop of track.

Arrive Field 6:10 P. M.

Surrounded by majestic peaks and tremendous glaciers, beautiful lakes and mighty waterfalls, Field is a veritable paradise for the mountain climber, sportsman and artist. The train remains over night at this delightful resort.

Leave Field 5:00 A. M. and Arrive Glacier 9:00 A. M.

Near the summit of the Selkirk Range lies Glacier in the midst of a region of mighty peaks and glaciers, woods and waterfalls. It is only an hour's walk from the station to the Great Glacier of the Selkirks. A stop of four hours will be made for the climb, which good footpaths make easy. Ponies are available if desired.

Leave Glacier 2:00 P. M.

From Glacier, descending the western slope of the Selkirks, the route follows the valley of the Illecilliwaet through Albert Canyon, a marvelous gorge of great depth and startling fascination, where stop of ten minutes will be made.

Short stops will be made at Revelstoke and Sicamous, after which the Thompson and Fraser Rivers will be followed to the Pacific Coast.

Arrive Vancouver 7:30 A. M.

On the shores of Buzzard Inlet, is the largest and most important business center in British Columbia, having a population of 130,000.

The especial pride of Vancouver is its harbor, which is one of the finest on the Pacific.

Leave Vancouver 10:30 A. M.

Sailing from Vancouver at 10:30 A. M. on one of the Canadian Pacific's famous Princess steamers, the trip on Puget Sound to Victoria and thence to Seattle will be a most enjoyable feature.

Arrive Victoria 3:00 P. M.

VICTORIA, which has been aptly described as a transplanted section of Old England, is charmingly situated and has many beautiful residences, fine parks and handsome Government buildings. A stop of one and one-half hours will be made to visit points of interest.

Leave Victoria 4:30 P. M. and Arrive in Seattle 9:30 P. M.

Natural location and topography have done much to make Seattle a city of varied attractions and of commanding importance. Since the earliest settlements on Puget Sound it has been a trading and commercial center, and in recent years has become one of the most important manufacturing cities on the Pacific Coast. The town was laid out in 1853 and was named after an Indian Chief known for his friendliness to the whites.

Only a couple of hours will be spent at Seattle during the evening. The train will be deadheaded from Vancouver and parked at a convenient point so that you may retire at any time during the evening.

Leave Seattle 11:45 P. M. and Arrive Portland 7:30 A. M.

PORTLAND, our convention city, is one of America's most beautiful cities, celebrated for its splendid environment, its wealth of roses and manifold attractions for tourists. The Rose Festival, in June of each year, is a pageant of national interest. Portland, a world-port, is on the Willamette River, near its confluence with the Columbia. Rising to a height of twelve hundred feet west of the city are ever-verdured hills. From their terraced slopes, flanked by many magnificent homes, the outlook sweeps the broad rich valleys of the Columbia and the Willamette, also five snow-crowned sentinels of the Cascade Range. Points of interest lie in every direction. Radiating from the city are three hundred miles of city boulevard and smooth surfaced highways—ideal for motoring. Mountains, valleys, rivers, lakes, forests, hot mineral springs of great curative powers, waterfalls, snow-capped peaks and the oceanside playgrounds—all are close to hand.

We contemplate modifying this trip to six days, reaching Portland Sunday afternoon. We shall be glad to have suggestions from any reader interested in this trip.

T. E. COSTAIN, Chairman.

CORRESPONDENCE

Place of Meeting, 1915

What is the Mind of the Institute Membership?

To the Journal of the American Institute of Homœopathy:

A majority of the Trustees of the Institute assembled Saturday, Oct. 10, at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago. When the meeting was called to order, attention was directed to the fact that there was no provision in the by-laws for holding a special meeting, and that in the absence of any member of the Board it was impossible to transact business.

Three members of the Board were not present, therefore the meeting became an informal conference to take up the question of location and any other business which was pressing for decision, with a view of getting the opinion of the members present and recommending to the Board at its regular meeting in December the result of the deliberations.

While the officers of the Board have certain authority for acting under the decisions of this conference, it is evident that the recommendations of this conference are not the decision of the Board, and may not be ratified by the Board at its regular meeting. This is a little unfortunate, but evidently seemed necessary to the officers in view of the wide-spread discussion concerning the place of meeting and the pressing influence that had been brought to bear upon the Trustees in favor of Portland or New Orleans as the next place of meeting.

It was evident from the start that a majority of the Board did not favor meeting at Portland. The first informal ballot named at least five different places, among them Chicago. It was also evident that the members of the Board living in Chicago were not urging that city as a meeting place, not because of the lack of facilities, nor because it would not meet all of the requirements for this year, but mainly because of the fact that it had not been named during the Institute meeting, that there had been no formal invitation from the profession, and that there was a feeling that Chicago might unduly influence the Board.

It will be interesting to observe, now that Portland has been tentatively selected, what the various editorials, Letters to the Editors and news columns will have to say. It is probable, if an actual count could be taken, that there would be as many people dissenting from this decision as from the former decision of the Board, and the object of this communication is to invite comment from the profession, in view of the fact that there is still time left before the Trustees can make their final decision.

Joseph P. Cobb.

The following is an analysis of the Treasurer's Reports for the last three years:

|                                | 1912       | 1913       | 1914       |

| General Institute Expense..... | 4,183.88   | 4,585.86   | 5,272.63   |

An increase of $1,088.75 for 1914 over that of 1912 for running the Institute.

A decrease of receipts from dues of $658.57.

A total on the wrong side of the ledger of $1,747.32.

In the face of these facts, the trustees accept the Treasurer's Report each year of a balance in the treasury without analyzing the facts.

A report from a standing committee that would put $5,000 in the treasury is called an "unthinkable proposition." [N. A. J. H.]

No large income can be expected from this source in the next few years unless active propagandistic efforts, which cost money, are made. Where is the money coming from?

Will the 2,500 members not present at Atlantic City support the 300 who want a trans-continental trip?

Are the trustees to act under the guidance of sentiment or good business sense?

What will be the attendance at Portland?

Place of Meeting, 1915—Open Letters

From Dr. Arthur B. Norton, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees, 1912-1914, to Dr. Jos. P. Cobb, member of Finance Committee.

New York, October, 15, 1914.

The report of the vote of the Trustees at the October meeting has been forwarded to me. When the Trustees, who have heretofore endorsed the Finance Committee's work, turn down the unanimous recommendation of their committee, it is time for me to withdraw. I was satisfied last August that they would not consider the most vital feature of a successful organization, i. e., money; that they would ignore the interests of a large number of our stockholders [or members] and be swayed by a very small minority, and go to Portland for the 1915 meeting.

I am convinced that the Trustees have made a serious mistake in their action and policy. Everybody admits that a Portland meeting will be a small one. Admit that all of the Trustees together have heard the sentiment of from two to three hundred members who wish to go to the Panama-Pacific Exposition and who favor Portland. This number represents about one-tenth of the stockholders [members] whose money the Trustees are not conserving, but, rather, squandering. You have given 2,500 out of 2,800 members no thought or consideration to what is best for them or what they would want.

This is not in itself the most discouraging feature. It is the return to old methods. We have made a good start this year with over $2,000. The $3,000 promised direct to the Institute treasury from Long Beach and the estimated $2,000 from exhibits would make a nice little nest egg for the conduct of the business of the Institute. The reversal of the policy of business methods puts the Institute back for two or three years at least, and all because we listen to the speeches and sentiment of a minority, even though a number of years ago we voted as a whole against these old methods and placed the selection of place of meeting in the hands of the Trustees for the sole purpose of getting away from such methods.

But why continue! Sufficient for me to say I am disgusted!

Norton.

From Dr. Norton to President Byron E. Miller.

My dear Dr. Miller:—

October 16, 1914.

Sailing on my summer's vacation before the Atlantic City meeting was over, I had no opportunity to congratulate you upon your election which I now most heartily do.

I have today received notification from the Secretary of my appointment as Chairman of the Finance Committee. I must admit my surprise and appreciation of the compliment paid me in this appointment.

Surprise because I had authorized the Secretary last August, in case that you should consider placing me on this committee, to assure you that under no circumstances would I accept any further responsibility for the finances of the Institute.

I saw "the handwriting on the wall" and felt, as proven, that the Trustees would reverse themselves, turn down the policy of the Finance Committee (of a business organization) and sacrifice the best interests of nine-tenths of our members, or stockholders, in this organization at the demand of about one-tenth.

No one claims that more than two or three hundred of our stockholders desire a Portland meeting (simply those who want to go to the exposition at the same time), and of these not one-half of them would be detained by a meeting anywhere else.

This would leave a balance of our stockholders of 2,500 or more, who have not been consulted, deprived by the Trustees of their rightful dividends, in the way of propagandistic and organization work, that could have been accomplished with the money that could have been earned this year by the organization of which each and every member is a stockholder. I understand that $3,000 added to our treasury was guaranteed, that men in the best position to judge believe it would have been $5,000.

The business of the A. I. H. is the advancement of homœopathy and the success of their society. No business can be successfully conducted without money. The A. I. H. has never had any, and homœopathy has suffered in consequence.

I feel very proud of my success as Chairman of the Finance Committee in securing for the Institute a nice little surplus instead of the deficit it would otherwise have had.

In my position as Trustee I consider myself morally obligated to act as I honestly believe best for the organization as a whole.

We all know that we cannot expect any financial profit to the Institute from a Portland meeting.

I personally believe more good (many times over) could come to our cause from the expenditure wisely of three to five thousand dollars for organization and propagandistic work, than could possibly come from catering to a few kickers.

The Institute placed the selection of the place of meeting solely in the hands of the Trustees to avoid this very thing—the swaying of the attendance by oratory.

The Trustees after careful deliberate consideration of all reasons voted at Atlantic City almost unanimously (only two dissenting) for Long Beach purely on business principles.

I believe at the bottom of their hearts the majority still feel it is a mistake to go to Portland, but that they did not dare to go contrary to the sentiment stirred up for personal and political reasons by a very few.

Feeling as I do that the Trustees have passed a vote of lack of confidence in their Finance Committee you can well understand why I decline to longer serve in any capacity on the Finance Committee.

As possibly Long Beach may come up again next year you can also understand why I decline to serve on the Committee for selection of place of meeting.

Allow me to assure you, Mr. President, that this is not a personal matter because I can't have my own way, for as a loyal member of the Institute I shall be glad to serve on the Publicity Committee in any way its chairman requests, or do anything I can to promote the success of the Institute and your administration.

Very sincerely yours,

A. B. Norton.

Have you ever tried Homœopathy? If you have you already know that it will cure anything that is curable. If you have not tried it, but have only listened to common talk or to doctors who are of another school, and naturally opposed to it, you would be discouraged from trying it, and possibly lose the only chance of ever getting well. But if you ask those who use it, you will be agreeably surprised to learn that it is a treatment that often cures when everything else has failed, and never injures the patient's stomach or body in any way, and is very pleasant to take.—Selected.

"Spell ferment and give its definition!" requested the teacher.

"F-e-r-m-e-n-t, to work," responded a diminutive maiden.

"Now place it in a sentence, so that I may be sure you understand its meaning."

"In the summer I would rather play out-of-doors than ferment in the schoolhouse."

GENERAL NEWS

California. Dr. Cowperthwaite writes that Dr. S. H. Aurand of Chicago was a welcome visitor to California, also that Dr. M. A. Barndt of Milwaukee has taken his family to Los Angeles and will locate somewhere in southern California. Dr. Barndt will be greatly missed from the Wisconsin society.

Dr. Paul D. Barnes (Hahn. Pac., 1913) announces location in Grass Valley, Nevada County.

At the first autumn meeting of the Los Angeles County Society, Dr. Robert A. Campbell presented an admirable extemporaneous address on Surgery of the Intestinal Tract. Many Easterners who knew Dr. M. R. Campbell, recognize in Dr. Robert Campbell "a worthy son of a noble sire."

The Southern California society met in Los Angeles October 14 and 15, presenting, as ever, a good program.

Dr. Samuel S. Salisbury, the Nestor of Homœopathy in Southern California, is very much alive, notwithstanding the error in a recent publication of placing him in a list "against whose name the asterisk of death is set." He is in active practice and rarely misses a society meeting.

Carrier delivery in Huntington Park has located Dr. E. H. King at 225 East Belgrave Avenue.

Connecticut. The towns of the Connecticut Valley are fortunate in being near enough to New York to have frequent reinforcement from New York friends in their medical programs. The October meeting of the state society, whose program is published in detail on another page, presented the usual variety of good medical material.

Cuba. Dr. G. E. Agramonte announces change of location to Calle 8, 44 Vedado, Havana. The war situation in Europe is likely to increase the number of winter visitors to the West Indies, and it is a good plan to keep a directory of Institute members at hand for ready reference.

Delaware. The Delaware State Society will come November 12. Half the available time will be given to clinics. Dr. Roman will conduct a surgical clinic and Dr. G. Harlan Wells a clinic in general medicine. This is a new departure for Delaware. Wherever such an experiment has been made, it has been a success.

Dr. Frank F. Pierson of Wilmington announces a change of office to 1007 Jefferson St.

District of Columbia. Dr. Harold E. Dunne, formerly of Ridgway, Penn., has located in Washington, at 1344 G St., N. W., for special work in conservative proctology.

England. The British Homœopathic Society puts forth a compact announcement for the year 1914-15, announcing the program of each monthly meeting in London which comes on the first Thursday of the month at 5, with tea at 4:30 and dinner at 7:30. At the October meeting, President Wynne Thomas gave the inaugural address, The Progress of Homœopathy during the last quarter of a century, and its relation to Modern Medicine.

Florida. The Florida medical profession has gained a valuable addition in Dr. Dean T. Smith, formerly of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Dr. Smith has found permanent residence at 221 Bay St., Daytona, where he will take up general practice and surgery.

Illinois. Evanston is to be congratulated upon the completion of a perfectly equipped hospital for contagious diseases. One of the novel features is the high bath tubs. Only those who have given a bath in the ordinary low tub can appreciate the value of this innovation. The hospital will accommodate fifty patients comfortably and in an emergency could take care of double that number. Dr. S. Victor Balderston is Chief of Staff.

Dr. A. W. Ogden has ended his internship in the Fergus Falls (Minn.) State Hospital and taken work in the Garfield Park Hospital in Chicago.

Dr. Clifford Mitchell was one of several American physicians invited to read a paper in Berlin in September of this year at the World's Congress for the study of sexual problems. Another peaceful occupation rudely disturbed by the European quarrel.

Dr. H. C. Telford, formerly of Attica, Ohio, has joined the medical profession in Ottawa, at 723 West Madison street.

Dr. Rhoda Pike Barstow, Dr. W. Henry Wilson, Dr. W. M. Honn, Dr. C. A. Frazee and Dr. Clifford Mitchell were in Springfield, Ill., on September 29th attending to legislative matters in the interest of the Illinois Homœopathic Medical Association.

Dr. Vaughan, president of the Chicago Homœopathic Society, presented Dr. Byron Miller as guest of the society at the October meeting. It was college night and speeches were made by Dr. Chislett and Dr. Cobb as well as by the President of the Institute. Dr. W. B. Hinsdale of Ann Arbor responded briefly to an enthusiastic round of applause. Dr. Vaughan promises two meetings a month and the reappearance of the C. H. M. S. Quartette.

Massachusetts. The announcement upon another page of the $100,000 gift to the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital extends the service of this hospital to a large obstetrical clientele. The data comes direct from Superintendent Mann and the building will materially increase the medical school properties in New England.

Dr. Frank C. Richardson, Registrar, has resigned to give more time to work connected with the Evans Memorial. Dr. Edward E. Allen has been appointed Registrar and Secretary of the Faculty.

The Italian translation of Dr. Francis MacCarthy's book, "Hygiene for Mother and Child" (Harper and Bros.), which is being done by Dr. C. D. Crespi, of Alessandria, has been delayed unavoidably by the war. As soon as the war storm clears, the book will be published by Vallardi of Milan.

Dr. Clifford F. Harvey, formerly of Philadelphia, has removed to 511 Talbot Ave., Dorchester Center.

New York. Dr. John Hudson Storer, Chairman of Committee on Local Arrangements, of the Homœopathic Medical Society of New York, issued the following announcement for the annual meeting. "In accordance with the policy expressed by several of the preceding presidents, arrangements for this meeting are being concluded in such manner that no expense shall fall upon the local profession in the matter of entertainment of the visiting members. It is therefore earnestly desired that the profession throughout the state shall support the efforts of this committee in making this meeting a success socially, by participating in the entertainment provided for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, October 13th and 14th." Dinner at Churchill's on Tuesday evening and a play at the Casino on Wednesday, Fritz Scheff in The Pretty Mrs. Smith, served to lighten the more serious business of the annual program.

Dr. George R. Critchlow, of Buffalo, announces change of office to 647 Lafayette Ave.

Dr. C. Winfield Perkins, formerly of Princeton and Trenton, N. J., after spending a year in postgraduate work in Paris, Vienna and Berlin, returned last June. Dr. Perkins is located permanently at the Harris Courts, Alexander St., Rochester, N. Y. He is associated on the surgical staff of Hahnemann Hospital and is doing surgery and surgical diagnosis exclusively.

Dr. Florence Ward of San Francisco has returned from Europe, and will be in the East during the winter, Aeolian Bldg., 42d St., New York City, returning to California in June, 1915.

Dr. James E. Tytler announces removal to The Wellesley, 440 West End Ave., New York City.

Dr. H. Leland Fifield of Syracuse, who is doing exclusive work in eye, ear, nose and throat, has joined the medical colony in the Physicians Building, 608 East Genesee St.

Dr. Edwin Finch, a Senior in the Institute since 1893, and "eighty-three years young," while retaining his residence in New Rochelle, is traveling in search of a more favorable climate.

The New York Medical College for Women reports a favorable prospect for the year with financial encouragement.

Ohio. Dr. B. J. Sanford has located at 1211 Nicholas Building, Toledo.

The Trustees of the Institute are invited to be the guests of Dr. C. E. Sawyer at White Oaks Farm, Marion, for the December meeting.

Both Dr. Baxter and Dr. Sawyer have been on the sick list since the Institute session, but have now recovered.

Pennsylvania. The newly-elected president of the state society, Dr. B. F. Books, has inaugurated his term of service by a definite plan to increase the efficiency of the Alumni Association by providing in the revised by-laws for an associate membership which shall include all homœopathic physicians of the state, whether graduates of Philadelphia Hahnemann or of any other college. This will make the organization one representative of nation-wide homœopathy and will certainly strengthen the state organization. The other officers of the society are Drs. R. S. Piper and J. E. Belleville, vice-presidents; Dr. I. D. Metzgar, secretary; Dr. Ella D. Goff, treasurer; Drs. Ashcraft, Stewart and Bernstein, trustees for three years.

Dr. J. W. Frank presented an uncommonly good paper on Pathological Lesions of the Ailimentary Tract before the October meeting of the Homœopathic Medical Society of the County of Philadelphia. Lantern demonstration of the technic with Roentgen rays accompanied the paper.

Dr. C. A. Mentzer has succeeded to the practice of Dr. H. W. Webner, 1427 W. Lombard St., Baltimore.

Mr. William Cheyney Poor announces the marriage of his daughter, Nellie Poor Fiale to Dr. Romaine Crawford Hoffman, September 14. At home in Narberth.

Mr. Joseph Nelson White announces the marriage of his daughter, Madeleine to Dr. Roy Eugene Hoyt. At home in Chillicothe, Ohio.

Dr. Mary Branson presented the diplomas and Dr. Ralph Bernstein delivered the address to the graduating class of nurses at the Women's Southern Homœopathic Hospital.

Vermont. The semi-annual meeting of the Vermont Homœopathic Medical Society was held at Rutland, October 7th. For the number of homœopathic physicians in the state, there was a fine attendance. Infantile paralysis was the chief subject discussed and Dr. Forbes, the secretary, who lives right in the infected district, has promised to send the JOURNAL an account of this epidemic.

Both Dr. Forbes and Dr. Wyman spoke enthusiastically for the Institute of Homœopathy and its JOURNAL and tried to do some "propagandic" work which may bear some fruit.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE MEETING

Reported by Dr. Ralph Bernstein.

The Homœopathic Medical Society of Pennsylvania held its fifty-first annual meeting in Galen Hall, Wernersville, Pa., on Sept. 24, 25 and 26.

The Mayor of Reading extended a hearty welcome to the delegates to which Dr. D. C. Kline responded, after which Dr. L. T. Ashcraft, president of the State Society, delivered the annual address.

On the first day of the meeting Dr. J. J. Tuller, chairman of the Legislative Committee, and Dr. B. F. Books, chairman of the Homœopathic Committee, gave interesting reports of many important matters under consideration. Dr. Emma T. Schreiner, chairman of the committee on The Fight Against the Social Evil, gave a very favorable report. The Bureau of Sanitary Science held a meeting at which time they discussed the problem of The Mentally Defective. Among those taking part in the discussion were Dr. William Hunsicker, of Philadelphia; Dr. B. F. Royer, Chief Medical Inspector of Pennsylvania; Dr. E. K. Sprague, surgeon at the Federal Immigration Station, Ellis Island, N. Y.; Dr. William F. Snow, secretary of the American Social Hygiene Association, and several other noted homœopaths. Other meetings were held by the Bureau of Homœopathic Institutes and Clinical Medicine at which Dr. Ralph Bernstein, of Philadelphia, spoke most interestingly. The evening sessions were devoted to discussions on Ear, Nose, and Throat.

The discussion of Infant Troubles was taken up on Friday under the direction of Dr. William F. Doyle. Interesting papers were read by Dr. E. S. Raue, of Philadelphia and Dr. F. M. E. Howell, of Reading. The afternoon session was devoted to Materia Medica with papers by Dr. G. Harlan Wells, Dr. Augustus Korndoerfer and Dr. O. S. Haines.

The discussion on Surgery and Pathology concluded the scientific program and was participated in by Drs. H. L. Northrop, J. D. Elliott, D. Roman, Walter Barker, H. Hyzer, G. A. Hopp, C. M. Harvey, J. E.

James, Jr., C. A. Bigler, H. M. Eberhard, W. M. Sylvís, B. F. Hill, J. M. Kenworthy, J. G. Wurtz and S. W. Sappington, all of Philadelphia.

PUBLIC HEALTH WORK

In the April JOURNAL (p. 925) a letter from Dr. W. B. Hinsdale presented the plan of the Michigan Survey. The purpose of the survey was "to prepare an approximate estimate as to how much homœopathic physicians, outside private practice, contribute toward maintaining or bettering the social order."

This survey was reported upon by Dr. Hinsdale at the Michigan state meeting in May, and the results recorded in the Homœopathic Observer for July (p. 90). In that report Dr. Hinsdale summarizes his returns under:

(a) Numerical Strength. From careful compilation of result records in the University Health Service, Dr. Hinsdale concludes:

"If 40 per cent out of nearly 6,000 young people who represent the selected families of the country at large, voluntarily go to a university office labeled Homœopathic, it goes to indicate that the percentage given elsewhere in this resume is more than confirmed by a test case in which careful, statistical and scientific methods are applied."

(b) Charity. "No class of business men do so much for the public welfare as the physicians. It is a part of the life that the doctor lives to render gratuitous medicines, services and comfort to those of his fellows who are suffering from bodily ailment."

(c) General Medical Service. "In municipal, local and government health service there is a better showing than in the service under state control. In these specific offices, there were reported 366. Besides these there were reported milk inspectors, school inspectors, examiner for Juvenile court, United States Marine Service, Y. M. C. A. Board, Civil Service Examiners, members of boards of education, bank directors and half a dozen mayors."

(d) Public Utilities. "Most of the railroad lines and manufacturing industries, not under the contract system, manifest reasonable liberality towards the surgeons of our school, although occasionally the evidence is conclusive that certain ones discriminate to our disadvantage. Of railroads, the Pere Marquette has the largest number of homœopathic surgeons. The New York Life has the greatest number of homœopathic examiners."

(e) State Institutions. "We have two members upon the State Sanitarium Board, one upon the Board of Pardons, none upon that most important board, from the medical standpoint, the State Board of Health. Of course we have such representation upon the Board of Medical Examiners, as the law requires. But relatively we do not receive as many appointments upon the various permanent state service boards as our numbers and clientele would demand. . . .

"The reason why the minority does not receive, in this class of cases, a proportionate distribution, is largely the fault of themselves. . . . As an organization we do not persist and insist, as a group of self-respecting gentlemen should, upon wider recognition. Of course the matter of 'getting places' is largely a political affair. Some people rather shrink from the political methods usually necessary to selection for a position. As a class, we are poor politicians and indifferent agitators."

The entire report of six printed pages is well worth a careful reading. Such a report represents many hours of work, and as Dr. Hinsdale in his record incidentally remarks, over fifty dollars for actual outlay in printing, postage and addressing letters.

A similar survey should be made in every state. With the purpose of stirring up some enthusiasm for such investigation, a request was sent out to secretaries of state societies, or to personal friends in states where no society was listed in the JOURNAL, for such a list as could be given off-hand as a preliminary report. Indiana was the first to respond, and so promptly as to betoken systematic work on the part of the Secretary.

Following are the replies:

Indiana. Dr. A. A. Ogle: Dr. T. H. Davis, Richmond, President Indiana State Board of Health; Dr. E. J. Beardsley, Alexandria, Secretary Board of Health; Dr. Frank A. Benham, Elkhart, Coroner; Dr. L. E. Bracken, Columbus, Coroner; Dr. C. E. Canaday, New Castle, Health Officer; Dr. S. S. DeLancey, Williamsport, Secretary County Board of Health; Dr. E. A. Edmonds, Hebron, Health Officer; Dr. E. M. Evans, Mecca, County Health Officer; Dr. L. M. Godfrey, Kentland, County Health Officer; Dr. Martha Allen Goings, Red Key, Secretary Town Board of Health; Dr. Stanton E. Gordin, Connersville, Health Officer; Dr. W. T. Gott, Crawfordsville, Secretary State Board, Medical Registration and Examination; Dr. T. B. Gullefer, Greenberg, Health Officer; Dr. J. G. Lewis, Rushville, Secretary City Board of Health; Dr. E. N. Loy, Rensselaer, County Health Commissioner; Dr. J. S. Martin, Plymouth, Health Officer of County; Dr. L. A. Mott, Elwood, City Health Officer; Dr. Geo. L. Shoemaker, North Manchester, Secretary County Board of Health; Dr. J. W. Smith, Vevay, Secretary City Board of Health; Dr. D. W. Weaver, Greenburg, County Health Commissioner; Dr. J. G. Webster, Colfax, Health Office.

Alabama. Dr. A. M. Duffield: Having read the most interesting and instructive "Survey of Michigan" by Dr. W. B. Hinsdale, which so ably sets forth the great hold that homœopathy has in the North, I feel constrained to make a survey from one of the weakest states as a sort of a minority report, in the hope that it may be the means of bringing reinforcements to a cause, which has been fostered and defended by a mere handful of loyal adherents to the homœopathic practice in the South, for over half a century.

In making this survey of Alabama, I have used the same set of questions used by Dr. Hinsdale (to whom I am greatly indebted for copies of same and kindly encouragement in the work). There was one report each from Mobile and Birmingham, each of which cites has three physicians of our school, which with myself in Huntsville, counts only seven all told in active practice in the state. The only response from Birmingham was that he did not have privilege of practice in the County Hospital, which was strictly charity under control of commissioners.

The only report from Mobile is as follows:

"Nominated member of Revenue and Road Commissioners of Mobile County, State Pension Examiner, Examiner for Empire Life Insurance and Casualty Company, physician for several mills. All public institutions allow homœopathic physicians to practice. Doing $500 worth of public charity work."

The report from Huntsville, which is a hundred miles from Birmingham, the nearest available point for consultation is as follows:

Ex-President of the U. S. Board of Pension Examining Surgeons, Director of the Chamber of Commerce. Examiner for Equitable Life Assurance Society, Heralds of Liberty, etc.

It would be very difficult to estimate the percentage of those employing homœopathy here, but possibly 5% and double that kindly disposed to it. Do charity work but could not estimate how much.

As to newspaper influence, Mr. I. E. Pierce, editor of The Daily Times, is one of my patrons, and prints all that I will give him, saying that he considers me a staff writer.

Miss Susanna Withers Clay, editor and proprietor of The Weekly Democrat, has me assist her a good deal on the editorial and other writing for her. She is a good homœopathic booster.

Hon. C. W. Thomas, owner and editor of The Citronelle Weekly Call, is another. There is no regular homœopathic institution in the state that I know of. I have recently been requested by the president to give a series of half a dozen lectures to the nurses in training at the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Normal, Ala., for which he offers a compensation. This is a colored school under state patronage and helped by northern capital also. They have a resident (old school) physician, who is a brother-in-law to the president of the institution. I am also consulted as an expert on the physical condition of the students.

The field in Alabama is open to all comers who can pass the state examination, which ranks with the best in the land, but should be no barrier to a graduate of any homœopathic college, as no questions are allowed to be asked in Materia Medica or Practice. Every city needs our physicians right now.

Minneapolis. Dr. Annah Hurd: Dr. Glenn Matchan, Minneapolis, City Board of Health; Dr. H. D. Newkirk, Minneapolis, Psychopathic Clinic in connection with the Juvenile Court; Dr. Florence Richardson, Minneapolis, one of Examining Physicians for girls of Juvenile Court. [A full report promised.]

North Dakota. Dr. F. Margaret Peake: As far as I know there are no homœopathic physicians doing Public Health work in North Dakota.

Illinois. Dr. G. M. Cushing: Physicians trained in homœopathic therapeutics and engaged in Public Health work: Dr. T. B. Lewis, Hammond, member State Board of Health; Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, Springfield, Secretary and Executive Officer of State Board of Health; Dr. G. M. Cushing, Chicago, Supervising Health Officer; Dr. A. C. Tenney, Chicago, Medical Inspector; Dr. Margaret Everham, Chicago, Medical Inspector; Dr. C. C. Thomas, Chicago, Health Officer, all under the City Health Department.

Dr. J. W. Calvert: Dr. Sam Parr, Ottawa, Health Officer.

New York. Dr. Bert B. Clark: Drs. Eugene H. Porter, Harlan P. Cole, Hills Cole, New York; Herbert D. Schenck, Brooklyn, F. Park Lewis, Buffalo; L. L. Button, Rochester; B. W. Sherwood, G. J. Gannett, Syracuse; Geo. P. Holden, Yonkers.

South Dakota. Dr. George H. Fulford: Dr. E. W. Feige, Woonsocket, member State Board of Examiners and State Board of Health; Dr. George H. Fulford, Sioux Falls, Supt. Minnehaha County Board of Health; Dr. O. N. Hoyt, Pierre, Supt. County Board of Health; Dr. Wm. Lowe, Madison, Supt. County Board of Health; Dr. A. O. Cotton, Vermillion, Supt. County Board of Health; Dr. J. W. Ellis, Elk Point, Supt. County Board of Health.

Maine. Dr. Luther A. Brown: Dr. John T. Palmer, Portland, is Secretary of the Portland Board of Health. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, Portland, is Bacteriologist to the same board.

Kentucky. Dr. H. P. Fischbach: Dr. Keller and Dr. C. A. Fish of Frankfort, Ky., are on the State Board of Health. Dr. Struble is Health Officer in Dayton.

Delaware. Dr. Victor D. Washburn: Dr. A. E. Frantz is Secretary of the Delaware State Board of Health, Dr. C. A.

Ritchie is also a member of that body. Both of these gentlemen are located in Wilmington and the last named is a member of the Institute. Dr. Julian Adair is a member of the Wilmington Board of Health, Dr. W. F. Hoey is a member of the Board of Health at Frederica, Del. Dr. W. H. Steele is a member of the Board at Newark, Del.

This covers the list, I think. In case you have not covered Maryland, I know that Dr. George R. Jones of Galena, Md., is a member of the Board of Health in that place.

Rhode Island. Dr. Wm. M. Muncy: Dr. John H. Bennett is and has been a member of the State Board of Health, having been re-elected last year for a new term of five years. Drs. Charles A. Barnard and Dr. George F. Allison are Medical Examiners (Coroner's Physicians) for their respective towns. I hold the position of Oculist for the Providence School Children under the City Board of Health, and also for East Providence.

Wisconsin. Dr. Mary Hopkins: Dr. Charles Sutherland, of Janesville, member of the State Board of Health. (A detailed report promised.)

California. Dr. A. C. Cowperthwaite: Dr. Robert A. Campbell, California State Board of Medical Examiners.

Washington. Dr. E. M. Carney: Dr. F. G. Brooks, Anacortes, Wash., is the Health Commissioner there. He is the only one I know doing Public Health work.

Virginia. Dr. Garnette Johnson promises a report after the meeting of Southern Homœopathic, Nov. 10 to 12.

Colorado. Dr. P. G. Rowe promises a full report.

Connecticut. Dr. Samuel Worcester: Dr. Edward Beecher Hooker of Hartford has been and is active in all questions affecting public health, especially that part devoted to the suppression of the social evil. Dr. A. J. Phillips of Derby is our representative on State Board of Health.

Missouri. Dr. Luella Z. Rummel: Dr. T. H. Wilcoxen, Bowling Green, State Board; Dr. Edith Weaver Johnson, physician to the Y. W. C. A., Kansas City. She has her office in their building, makes all their examinations for the swimming pool and attends to any emergency work. Dr. Edgar W. Johnson is House Surgeon for Armour's Packing Company, also Fowler Packing Company.

The staff of physicians in attendance at the Armour Home for aged couples is homœopathic. General Medical, Dr. W. L. Ray, Dr. G. W. Smith, Dr. Emil Theilman, Dr. C. K. Wiles, Dr.

A. E. Leonard, Dr. E. E. Reed; Stomach Specialist, Dr. Maclay Lyon; Nervous Diseases, Dr. Lynne B. Greene; Surgeons, Dr. W. E. Cramer, Dr. Frank Elliott; Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Dr. J. M. Patterson, Dr. C. E. Allen, Dr. I. C. Soule.

As for myself, I have been giving a course of three lectures before Parent-Teacher Associations on Parental Responsibility in Child Training, The Approach of Adolescence, Telling the Story of Life.

CORRECTIONS.

On page 452, J. A. I. H., October, Dr. Ward R. Noyes, Brattleboro, Vermont, should be credited to the New York College, 1896, and Dr. Edward S. Calderwood, to Boston University, 1904.

On page 451, the committee Council on Medical Education is named in order of term of service. The word "chairman" should be omitted, as the chairmanship remains with Dr. Royal. Dr. Sutherland has been reappointed to serve on this committee for five years.

The Separate Examining Board: In an interesting paper by Dr. Edgar H. Howell, read before the last meeting of the State Society and printed in a recent number of the JOURNAL, the doctor concludes that it would be good policy that the American Institute of Homœopathy establish a standard of pre-medical and medical education, to apply to all our colleges; and especially that we should fight for the separate board system in every State, thus returning to the old method that worked perfectly and was satisfactory to all but the scheming representatives of the American Medical Association, who for political purposes hoodwinked us all into favoring the single board. Those of us that objected and saw sinister designs in this move were pointed out as obstructionists to progress and modern scientific development. Well, they were not very far wrong, after all, and the separate board is again the goal for which to strive. Another important suggestion of Dr. Howell is for unification of the examinations, so that a license received in any State would be recognized throughout all—in other words, national licensure by representative national associations—that of the homœopaths to be in the hands of the American Institute of Homœopathy. These suggestions of Dr. Howell are wise and practical and their adoption would go far to correct drawbacks of our present system. The matter might be taken up at the coming meeting of the Southern California Homœopathic Society, and should receive special attention next year at the State Society and later at the meeting of the Institute.

This is a matter upon which the incoming President, Dr. Byron Miller, who has served many years on the Examining Board of his State, can speak with a good deal of knowledge and authority, and we hope he will take up the matter for full consideration.—Editorial, Pac. Coast Jour. Hom., October, 1914.

WORTH REPEATING

Hahnemann's Masterpiece. "Die Milde Macht ist Gross," and it not infrequently is the case that the smallest and apparently mildest books are the mightiest and most epoch-making in their influence. It is not far wide of the truth to claim that the small book under consideration is more replete with wisdom, that is, with knowledge tempered with judgment, than most of the medical books that have been written. From its definite and striking beginning it marches steadfastly and with almost unassailable logic and with stately dignity from point to point, almost like an inspired book, to its end. From beginning to end there is nothing superfluous in it. Its statements are brief to the point of being dogmatic. Its analyses of experience manifest a phenomenally accurate observation. And it clearly outlines a system of medical treatment, which is the result of many years of close study and original research and a courageous and profound common sense. Tradition is eliminated from its pages, and its author presents a rational art of healing that forms the greatest and most comprehensive reformation ever witnessed by medicine.

Hahnemann's views of medicine are not narrow or circumscribed. He was not the intentional originator of a sect in medicine. He did not exhibit an exceptional originality in the development of a System of Practice. Many of his predecessors had originated systems that endured for a time, but he realized more keenly than any of his disciples the scope and limitations of his system, and demonstrated with convincing power that the broad field of medicine was much bigger than that system.

A reasonably attentive reading of Hahnemann's Organon and Lesser Writings will convince one that he appreciated most clearly the value of a knowledge of etiology; that he recognized the importance of hygiene; that he believed preventive medicine should be a part of the physician's duty; that he considered surgery not only a useful but a necessary art; that he realized the efficacy of psychotherapeutics and advocated the same; that he recommended a rational and humane method of treating the insane; that far in advance of his day he proclaimed the germ origin of cholera and instituted a method of destroying its microorganism; that he recognized also the pathogenic and therapeutic possibilities of diet; and all this in addition to his evolution of homœopathy, the establishment of which was his greatest achievement.

Does this indicate a narrow or restricted view of medicine? Is it the attitude of one devoted to sectarian practice? Let us see what Hahnemann has to say for himself in his Organon as translated by Professor Conrad Wesselhœft, at one time president of the Institute. In that notable paragraph number 3, which deals with the knowledge necessary to the true physician, we find an idea often overlooked by the practitioner of homœopathy, who is herein urged to know "What is curable in diseases in general and in each individual case in particular." That is to say, in spite of confidence in the efficacy of drugs or any curative agent, in spite of the optimism which leads some physicians to believe that the impossible may be accomplished by drugs, some diseases are incurable, and it is the physician's duty to know what it is reasonable to expect in the treatment of a given case. This demands a most intimate familiarity with the causes, the course, the pathology and the prognosis of diseases and is in itself a sufficient rebuttal of the criticism that homœopathists have no use for diagnosis.

In the same paragraph, after insisting that the physician should know the curative power of drugs and how to adapt the curative property of drugs to what is curable in his patient, Hahnemann concludes with the profound and significant sentence, "Finally, when the physician knows in each case the obstacles in the way of recovery, and how to remove them, he is prepared to act thoroughly and to the purpose, as a true master of the art of healing." This certainly means that a knowledge of diseases, a knowledge of drug pathogenesis, and an ability to prescribe intelligently are not sufficient for him who would be a master of healing; that the prescribing of the drug in any potency is only a part of the physician's duty. To remove doubt on this subject Hahnemann goes somewhat into detail and gives examples in paragraphs 7 and 260 of obstacles which may prevent even the most accurate diagnosis and the most applicable prescription from having fruitful results. For instance, he says in his note 3 to paragraph 7 apropos of maintaining causes which may prove obstacles to recovery, "As a matter of course, every sensible physician will remove such causes at first; after which, the illness will generally subside of its own accord. He will remove from the sickroom flowers that may produce faintness, conditions and circumstances should be carefully avoided and removed, lest the cure might be impeded or rendered impossible. Some of my disciples appear to impose unnecessary restrictions on their patients by prohibiting a still greater number of quite indifferent things, a course which is not to be sanctioned."

Is there room for doubt that Hahnemann did not pin his faith solely to the use of drugs? Or that his method of practice included more than reliance upon and use of the similar remedy?

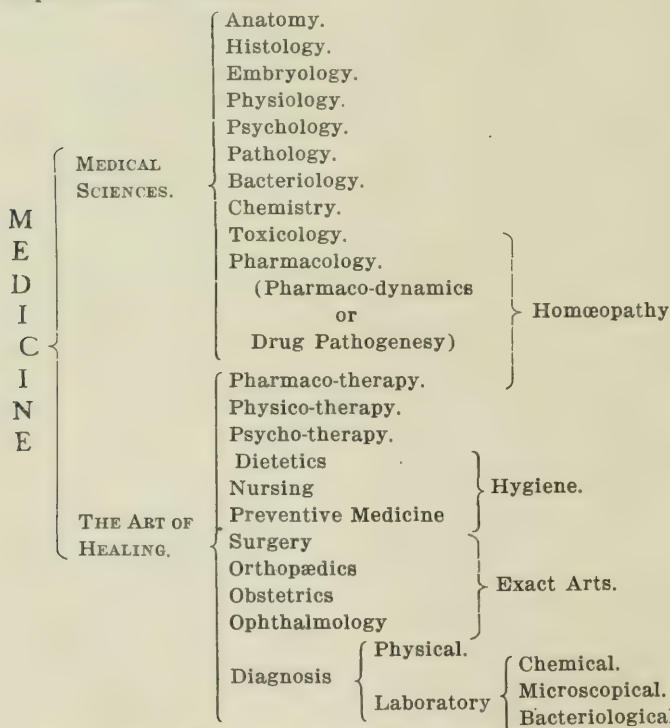

These few quotations plainly show that Hahnemann recognized the fact that not all diseases and not all cases of so-called curable diseases are curable by drugs alone:—that obstacles of various kinds, psychic, material, unhygienic, dietetic, etc., may prevent even the most homœopathic remedy from exerting its curative action:—that after the removal of an exciting or maintaining cause many diseased states will disappear without treatment:—that there are times when the use of an emetic is imperative:—that some conditions require surgical treatment rather than medicinal.

Conclusion. Homœopathy is a method of treating the sick in accordance with the formula "similia similibus curentur;" it is a specialty in pharmaco-therapeutics, a specialty in the great Art of Healing, and as a special art is based upon certain knowledges or sciences as indicated in the chart.

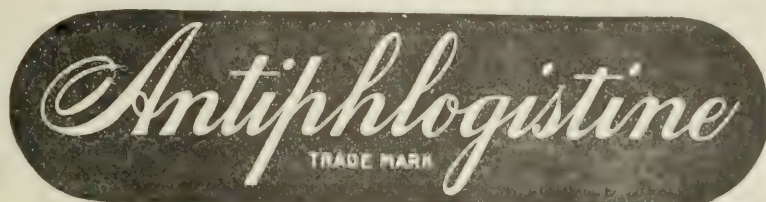

But Homœopathy is only a part of the great field of Medicine which in its entirety is THE Art of Healing based upon the recognized medical sciences. The sciences included are independent departments of human knowledge, each complete in itself and capable of many uses, but the art of healing with all its subdivisions is the highest use to which they can be put. The position of Homœopathy in this complex field of sciences and arts, its relationship to the latter, may be shown by a simple schema as follows:

It has been my purpose in this incomplete study of the teachings of Hahnemann, as found chiefly in the Organon, to show that his conception of Medicine was something much more comprehensive than his conception of Homœopathy; that he realized the importance to the physician of something more than a knowledge of drug-pathogenesis; that his teachings included more than the value of the law of similars.

Corpora Lutea

in disorders of the menopause

There is abundant evidence that the ovarian principle, represented in Corpora Lutea, P. D. & Co., is of much value in controlling the complex and annoying symptoms attending the artificial menopause, especially in young women, and in relieving the nervous disturbances incidental to the natural menopause. It has also been successfully used in amenorrhea, dysmenorrhea, chlorosis, menorrhagia, hysteria, neurasthenia, and as an aphrodisiac.

We supply the dried and powdered Corpora Lutea in capsules containing 5 grains each, which is the equivalent of about 30 grains of fresh corpus luteum.

The physician who employs both Corpora Lutea, P. D. & Co., and the average ovarian extract, will discover that there is a marked difference in them therapeutically.

There is a reason for this.

In the preparation of Corpora Lutea, P. D. & Co., only the yellow granular material from fresh ovaries is used, constituting about one-sixth of the whole gland. The remainder is discarded!

We have reports of numerous cases in which Corpora Lutea, P. D. & Co., was used with marked success after other ovarian preparations had failed.

SLEE'S GLYCERINATED VACCINE VIRUS.

(Smallpox Vaccine)

The glycerinized smallpox vaccine now in general use in this country was first introduced commercially to American physicians by Dr. Richard Slee, director of the Slee Laboratories. The superior quality of this vaccine was soon recognized, and in no more striking way than through its adoption by the United States Army, which has used Slee's Smallpox Vaccine continuously since 1898.

From the very beginning, Slee's Smallpox Vaccine has maintained its high character. Today we confidently assert that it has no superior, and considering the uniform quality of our output we may add with almost equal confidence, that it has very few if any equals.

It is prepared and packaged at the Slee Laboratories under conditions assuring purity and potency. Every practical precaution is taken to present a finished product uncombined with foreign organisms.

The laboratories themselves are miles removed from the dirt and other contaminating influences of the city. Only young heifers known to be free from disease are utilized in the production of this vaccine; they are pastured and stabled in the mountains of Pennsylvania and are rigidly inspected by resident veterinarians.

Slee's Glycerinated Vaccine Virus is prepared under Government License No. 6, the Slee Laboratories being one of the first to receive its license.

When properly used Slee's Glycerinated Vaccine Virus produces an absolutely typical and protective "take"—a systemic prophylaxis without severe local reaction.

This vaccine is marketed in glass capillary tubes of standard size, with all the necessary accessories, such as scaring needles, expression bulb, etc.

The price per package of ten tubes is . . . . . $1.50

Per package of five . . . . . .75

AN ALLY WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.

It is going on toward 20 years since Gray's Glycerine Tonic Comp. was first placed at the service of the medical profession. During all this period Gray's Glycerine Tonic Comp. has maintained the standards that first attracted attention and the busy practitioner has ever found it an ally worthy of confidence. It never disappoints and in the treatment of atonic conditions, particularly of the gastro-intestinal tract, it is often the one remedy that will produce tangible and satisfactory results. The physician who does not use it in his practice is denying his patient many benefits that can be obtained in no other way.

GLYCO-THYMOLINE FOR COLDS.

At this season of the year the crop of "colds" becomes very numerous.

One of the first efforts of the physician aims at relieving the congestion of the nasal mucous membrane and bring some degree of comfort to his patient.

Glyco-Thymoline in a 25% solution used in connection with the K. & O. Nasal Douche, not only cleanses the nasal passages of the mucous secretions but also reduces the congestion by its exosmotic action, thereby giving the patient a degree of comfort that will be thoroughly appreciated.

Treatment and Prophylaxis of Lobar Pneumonia

Recovery from pneumonia depends chiefly upon the formation of antibodies destructive to the pneumococci and capable of neutralizing their toxins.

Antipneumococcic Serum Polyvalent Mulford is the blood serum of horses immunized against different strains of pneumococci that produce corresponding antibodies and is, therefore, polyvalent. Used in the early stages of pneumonia and in sufficient doses, the serum affords valuable aid on account of these specific antibodies.

Bleeding immunized horse in operating room. Care is taken to insure asepsis.

Dosage and Administration.—The minimum therapeutic dose, according to Cole,* must be at least 100 c.c. repeated at intervals of four to six hours in order to secure sufficient concentration of antibodies in the blood to overcome the infection. Since quick response is desired the intravenous use of the serum is preferred.

Antipneumococcic Serum Mulford (polyvalent) is furnished in 20 c.c. aseptic glass syringes and in 50 c.c. ampuls with sterile rubber tube and special needle for intravenous injection.

Bacterin and Serobacterin Treatment

The value of bacterin treatment in pneumonia is recognized. Like the serum, the bacterin should be polyvalent, and administered at the earliest possible moment. It is frequently employed as an adjunct to serum treatment, stimulating the production of greater amounts of antibodies by the patient.

Time is a vital factor in the treatment of pneumonia. For this reason the advisability of the early use of Pneumo-Serobacterin Mulford should be carefully considered; its action is prompt and larger doses may be given at short intervals, securing quicker immunity.

Prophylactic Immunization Against Pneumonia

A series of "mass" experiments in preventive immunization against pneumonia were recently carried out in South Africa by Sir Almroth E. Wright, in conjunction with Morgan, Colebrook and Dodgson, upon a large number of native miners having very low resistance against the pneumococcus.

Summarizing their report, the London Lancet says: "It seems difficult to resist the conclusion that the pneumococcus vaccines employed by these observers lessened the incidence and mortality of pneumonia and other conditions produced by the pneumococcus, and among large collections of natives who were highly susceptible to its activity and under conditions favorable to the spread of infection."

The work of Wright and his collaborators verifies in a conclusive manner the usefulness of prophylactic immunization against pneumonia.

Pneumo-Serobacterin Mulford is supplied in packages of four graduated syringes, A, B, C, D strength, and in syringes D strength separately.

HOME TREATMENT FOR

ALCOHOLISM

More than 700 physicians in Greater New York and over 3,000 in the United States have tested the efficacy of the Oppenheimer Treatment for Alcoholism.

The Rapid Remedy Co. was organized under license to the Oppenheimer Institute by prominent philanthropic citizens to place this treatment within the means of those who cannot afford an institutional or expensive cure.

The remedy furnished by the Company is identical in its curative ingredients and beneficial effects as that used at the Oppenheimer Institute, and is recommended by physicians to remove craving in from 12 to 36 hours. Its manufacture is personally superintended by Dr. Isaac Oppenheimer, the discoverer of the treatment and founder of the Institute, who is also president of the RAPID REMEDY COMPANY.

The Chronic Case Problem

The necessity for Institutional treatment in cases of Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Intemperance and Mental Disorders has long been recognized.

Many other chronic diseases likewise require the special attention possible in a well-ordered medical establishment.

Among the maladies to which Institutional Treatment is especially applicable may be mentioned the following: Diabetes, Obesity and other disorders requiring special metabolism studies and individual dietaries.

Neurasthenia, Hysteria, Nephritis and other similar cases which demand thorough diagnosis, careful treatment and special dietetic management.

Intestinal Toxemia, the mother of most chronic ailments, in which a change of intestinal flora, through radical change of diet and other special means, is essential.

In all cases requiring the use of special diagnostic methods, close medical supervision, metabolism studies, scientifically regulated diet and carefully graduated exercise, the Battle Creek Sanitarium system of treatment is of highest value.

More than one thousand physicians and five thousand members of physicians' families have availed themselves of the health opportunities offered here.

More than ten thousand invalids have sought and found relief through institutional treatment at Battle Creek through the advice of their family physicians.

A copy of "The Battle Creek Sanitarium System" will be mailed free to any physician, on request.

THE
Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital
of Philadelphia

*Offers Unexcelled Facilities for Clinical

The Institution offers a pre-medical preparatory year and a standard four years' course of studies in medicine. The candidate on graduation receives the degree of "Doctor of Medicine" and the special degree "Doctor of Homœopathic Medicine" as granted by the charter of the State of Pennsylvania.

New laboratories, a hospital of 300 beds under complete control of the medical school, and ward and dispensary work in small sections enhance the amount of individual instruction.

CLINICAL OPPORTUNITIES

Last year the Hahnemann Hospital admitted and treated in all its departments over 25,000 patients. This abundance of clinical material is all directly available for teaching purposes, which includes Clinical Lectures, Sectional Clinics, Ward Classes, Individual Ward Work, Dispensary Work and Clinical Laboratory Work in all its branches under direct supervision.

The College also has the advantage of affiliation, for teaching purposes, with The Children's Homœopathic Hospital, St. Luke's Homœopathic Hospital, The West Philadelphia General Homœopathic Hospital, Allentown Hospital for the Insane and Municipal Hospital for Contagious Diseases.

Special attention is directed to the Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics. The munificent endowment of Mr. Walter E. Hering has established for all time the Constantine Hering Chair of Homœopathic Materia Medica, Therapeutics and Pharmacology.

Post Graduate instruction is offered the Profession in the laboratories, wards, dispensaries and in the specialties throughout the year.

Correspondence is solicited.
